Moving Forward – 119

Now we set sail...

*“There is a tide in the affairs of men.
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat,
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures.”*

Chapter 1

The Silver Bricked Road

Me: Ok God, let's cut right to the chase. Is silver going to be more valuable after the crash of the unbacked fiat monetary system?

God: Yes, if you choose your next currency wisely.

Me: What do you mean?

God: You will have a choice of what to use as money after the crash. There will be those advocating a return to unbacked fiat money and there will be those who advocate a return to gold and silver as money. You must choose either or none.

Me: Either or none? How can we choose none? We have to have some form of money to function in any kind of normal society.

God: That is true, for now.

Me: So how can we choose none?

God: If you can't decide as a group you are free to decide as individuals.

Me: You mean barter?

God: I mean you can decide individually. You can choose to use gold and silver, you can choose to use the un-backed money of the past, you can choose to use one of the many crypto-currencies or you can choose something that you haven't even invented yet. The choice is yours if you don't decide as a group.

Me: Well what if I choose one thing for money and somebody else doesn't accept it as money?

God: That is their choice.

Me: I see what you are getting at. You are saying it probably won't work unless everyone chooses the same thing to use as money.

God: That's up to each individual. Over time the strongest forms of money usually rise to the top and become the standard.

Me: And that has been mostly gold and silver in the past?

God: Yes, although don't count out the crypto-currencies just because there is no past history to compare them against. All the other times that fiat money has failed, and there have been many, there were no crypto-currencies available.

Me: But after every monetary crash in the past people have returned to using gold and silver coins as money.

God: And they likely will again.

Me: But won't Silver be too valuable to use as money?

God: Now why would you say that?

Me: Because we need it to use in our industrial applications. It's needed in cell phones, solar panels and flat-screen TV's. How can we use it in those necessary things and use it as money at the same time? There's not enough silver for the dual purpose.

God: That is likely true but silver will be used in its "Highest and Best" use.

Me: And that is in our industrial applications, right?

God: Not necessarily. It may seem like the highest and best use of silver is in industrial applications today but what will it look like when your monetary system implodes and you are left with no currencies at all?

Me: Holy Moly! Silver will be used as money again! That would be its highest and best use when all other forms of money have been destroyed.

God: That is highly likely.

Me: Not 100% likely?

God: No. There are those that will attempt to stop the use of silver as money through legal mandates.

Me: Do you mean that large corporations who need silver to make their products will push to have monetary silver outlawed?

God: Yes. They will say that it's a strategic and necessary industrial material and they will try to have laws implemented to stop its use as money.

Me: You mean a kind of Reverse Fiat Money? A decree declaring that silver cannot be used as money?

God: Yes, they will try.

Me: But will they succeed?

God: That is up to you. What do you think?

Me: I can't see how they could get that kind of law passed especially since there will be absolutely NO FAITH in Government or our current monetary rulers at all after the crash.

God: You may be right.

Me: So if we do go back to using gold and silver as money I guess all those products that need silver will go away.

God: No, industrial users will have to innovate using other materials with similar properties. Silver may be the BEST conductor of electricity but it is not the ONLY one. The companies that used silver will have to innovate and create new methods to manufacture the same or similar products.

Me: And that's a good thing?

God: That's a GREAT thing! That's why you are here – to overcome challenges and create new experiences. To strive for greatness no matter what obstacles are thrown in your path. Come on Bix, we've talked about this many times before.

Me: I know. I was just testing you God.

God: Sure you were.

Me: Let's get serious. Silver as money – what would it be worth?

God: It will be worth what other people will give you for it.

Me: You mean we won't have a fixed value for silver?

God: You probably will but it's not about the value that is stamped on the coin. It's about the purchasing power of that coin.

Me: Hmm. I know that the United States defined the word "Dollar" in the Coinage Act of 1792 as being 371.25 grains of fine silver or 0.8577 ounces. Although they have never repealed that law they have added to the definition by coining the 1ounce American Silver Eagle and legally claiming it was worth "ONE DOLLAR" on the back of the coin. So will silver be worth one dollar an ounce after the crash?

God: That's what is defined in your law currently.

Me: But that "Dollar" will have a lot more purchasing power than our current Dollar right?

God: What you talk about, the "current dollar" is actually a Federal Reserve Note or a derivative of a real US Dollar.

Me: Ooo, you said the "D" word! Won't all the derivatives disappear after the collapse of the banks and the monetary system?

God: Yes, and with them goes the Federal Reserve Note.

Me: Good Riddance.

God: Here, here.

Me: So we will be left with a new Dollar?

God: No. You will be left with the OLD Dollar. A legally defined dollar in line with your laws will have much, much more purchasing power than your Federal Reserve Note.

Me: I get it. So how much purchasing power will it have? Will I be able to buy a car with a handful of silver coins?

God: You will be able to buy whatever someone will agree to sell you for your silver dollars. Do not confine your understanding of today's dollar and project it out into the future. Everything will be different. The prices of ALL things must be reestablished as they are all distorted by the current contorted and manipulated system. NOTHING will be priced the same relative to what you see today. Your world is about to change.

Me: Interesting. I guess I'll just have to wait and see what I can get for my new US Silver Dollars.

God: Yes, and even you will be surprised at their value once the manipulation of prices has ended.

Me: Good. And what about gold? Will we have gold coins that we can use as money too?

God: Yes, and before you ask, they will be valued at whatever someone will agree to exchange for gold. The way this process works is no different than determining the value of silver.

Me: But there is so much more hidden gold than there is hidden silver in the world. Will this all be taken into account?

God: Yes, all will be known about the gold and silver supplies that have been hidden for centuries.

Me: So the Silver/Gold ratio will go down right?

God: Way down.

Me: How far down?

God: As far down as people choose to value silver to gold.

Me: Give me a number. 20-1? 10-1? 1-1? How high can the price of silver go in relation to the price of gold?

God: It depends what relationship you are talking about as it is all relative. You can use the in-ground ratio of 8-1, the above ground ratio of 1-1, the mine output ratio of 8-1 or even the US Mint stamped ratio of 50-1.

Me: Why would we use that ratio? The Gold Eagles were denominated as $50 just to fool the masses about the value of gold vs silver.

God: Maybe so but until there is truth and honesty in your current system those are the ratio numbers according to the US Mint.

Me: Yeah, but the people that run the US Mint belong in jail for all of their abuses of silver prices over the years. They are co-conspirators in the rigging of the silver price from illegal rationing to holding massive naked silver hedge positions on the COMEX. I can't wait until they are exposed.

God: Don't get over zealous about shutting down the US Mint. You will need them going forward to coin your new money.

Me: I guess so but I still want some of the more criminal conspirators to be exposed in the end and the US Mint is high on my list.

God: All will be revealed and exposed in the end, Bix, and you can decide then if what they did was criminal.

Me: Very well.

Chapter 2

Bitcoin and The Chinese Millennial

Me: God, what's going to happen to Bitcoin in the future?

God: Bitcon will rise in popularity, rise in utility and rise in price.

Me: All three?

God: Yes, all three.

Me: Tell me about each. Why is Bitcoin going to rise in popularity?

God: At first it will seem like a speculative bonanza as the price begins to rise and people all over the world have friends who seem to be getting rich off Bitcoin. Young people will embrace Bitcoin and make it trendy and cool to be involved. During this process the young people will learn more and more about the technology as well as witness the ongoing failures in the fiat monetary system.

Me: So it's really going to start with the young people this time?

God: Yes, and they will not be spooked by wild fluctuations this time.

Me: I think you are right. Those that rode the first Bitcoin rise over $1,000/BTC and then crash down below $200/BTC have hardened to the wild price movements. Now they see every dip as a "buying opportunity."

God: Correct.

Me: But what about another major crash like the one that happened after the closure of the Mt. Gox Exchange? It smelled of massive fraud. After it imploded the price of Bitcoin dropped over 80%. Will that ever happen again with another Bitcoin exchange?

God: That problem, like all other problems with Bitcoin, has been solved. There are no more Mt. Gox's out there with large concentrations of Bitcoins trading on a single exchange with virtually no regulatory oversight. Now there are many highly regulated Bitcoin exchange platforms with a diverse set of investors and traders.

Me: That makes me feel better; it must make others more confident in the safety of Bitcoin as well.

God: Yes, and every price drop will be seen as a buying opportunity for those "Bitcoin Hipsters."

Me: Interesting. Sounds a lot like the Silver Bugs that have been riding the silver roller coaster up to $50/oz and back down to $15/oz that are just waiting for the ride back up.

God: Yes. Silver and Bitcoin will be the new "in thing" for the youth of the world.

Me: And what about the utility part? Are people really going to start using Bitcoin for more transactions and not just locking it away as savings?

God: Yes, in time. Stores, restaurants and movie theaters throughout the world will begin accepting payments in Bitcoin knowing that if they don't they will lose out on a huge sector of potential growth.

Me: But I thought that Bitcoin wasn't really accepted by many retail stores. That was one of the problems a few years back and I don't think it has changed much.

God: Not yet but it will. As the youth adopt Bitcoin to "be cool" then the retail stores will follow.

Me: But doesn't it take a lot of time for a change like that to happen? The retail stores will have to change their way of doing business. That can't happen over night.

God: It can, and it will.

Me: How?

God: Over the past few years while the spotlight has been off the Bitcoin phenomenon, the Bitcoin infrastructure has been built out and enhanced. Billions of dollars have been spent by venture capitalists on all kinds of new technologies to incorporate Bitcoin into the modern economy. Now anybody with a cell phone or an iPad can set-up a Bitcoin account and start accepting payments almost instantly.

Me: And that goes for retail stores too?

God: Yes. Although there are accounting issues related to accepting Bitcoin, those are easily overcome and soon it will be a seamless automated process.

Me: So as thousands and thousands of new customers start using Bitcoin, more and more retail stores will start accepting Bitcoin as payment.

God: No, millions and millions of new customers will start using Bitcoin around the world.

Me: Millions? Really? How many millions?

God: Hundreds of millions...and then Billions.

Me: That's crazy!

God: That's life.

Me: I guess I want to know about the price of Bitcoin now. Surely with millions of people using Bitcoin the price is going to skyrocket.

God: Yes.

Me: Well, how high will it go and how fast?

God: It will go very high, very fast.

Me: How high?

God: In relation to what?

Me: What do you mean?

God: Bitcoin is a global phenomenon so price is always relative to the different currencies in each country. In the USA the BTC price is compared to the current US Dollar Federal Reserve Notes. In China the BTC price is compared to the Chinese Yuan. In Russia the BTC price is compared to the Russian Ruble.

Me: I see. How high in US Dollar Federal Reserve Notes?

God: To infinity.

Me: Hang on. I see where you are going with this. At some point the US Dollar Federal Reserve Note will stop being accepted.

God: Yes.

Me: But until that day comes, what will Bitcoin be worth in US Dollars?

God: When?

Me: Let's say by the end of 2016.

God: $3,000 to $4,000 dollars.

Me: What?! That's impossible.

God: No, it isn't.

Me: That's an 800% rise in 6 months. Surely people will be taking profits off the table as the price gets so high.

God: Some will but they will turn around and put the fiat money right back into Bitcoin...only at higher prices.

Me: You mean people will be scared out of their Bitcoin because they are expecting a crash and when the price doesn't crash they will try to get back in?

God: Yes.

Me: But they'll still have massive profits.

God: And where will they put these profits?

Me: Um, into their bank accounts?

God: Really Bix? Do you really think that people who were smart enough to buy Bitcoin will cash out those gains only put it all back into a bank?

Me: Wow! I guess you're right. So who will be the sellers of Bitcoin when the rest of the world wants to buy it?

God: Sellers will dry-up practically overnight.

Me: So where will the new Bitcoin come from to meet demand?

God: Bitcoin mining.

Me: But that's way too complicated for your "Average Joe" to understand. People can barely understand using Bitcoin for transactions much less mining Bitcoin.

God: They will not need to understand it. They will just have to press the "ON" button on their Wi-Fi devices and the Bitcoin mining will start automatically.

Me: Do you mean those embedded micro-Bitcoin mining chips that I've been hearing about?

God: Yes, every device that is connected to the internet will be mining Bitcoin.

Me: Wow. But won't their mining efforts be tiny? I mean, those micro-Bitcoin mining chips don't mine much Bitcoin at all.

God: They won't need to as the price rises.

Me: I guess not. So when will all these changes really kick in?

God: Be more specific.

Me: When will the Bitcoin craze really hit home with prices skyrocketing by the minute?

God: When people no longer see Bitcoin as an investment or a tool but as a legitimate way to escape the fiat money system.

Me: And then they will all start shifting their investments into Bitcoin?

God: No, then they will PANIC to buy Bitcon ... at any price.

Me: Wait God. Bitcoin is not their only choice to flee the fiat monetary system. What about gold and silver?

God: There will be very little physical gold and silver available to buy and the price of each will be so high that transactions will be difficult to execute.

Me: Hmm. I never thought of that. So Bitcoin will be easier to buy and sell than gold and silver.

God: Yes, as you can buy smaller and smaller amounts.

Me: How small?

God: Currently Bitcoin is divisible down to 8 decimal places or 0.00000001 BTC.

Me: What do you mean “currently?”

God: The Bitcoin protocol can be changed to accept more decimal places if needed.

Me: So the price of one Bitcoin really can get into the millions of dollars in the future and still be used to buy a gumball at the store in the future!

God: Definitely.

Me: What should I watch for that will prove Bitcoin will be adopted by the masses at an ever-increasing rate?

God: Watch the demand from China since that’s where it will become trendy to the youth.

Me: China?! That will be massive if Bitcoin becomes trendy in China.

God: Yes, there are 400 million millennials in China.

Me: What's a "millennial" again?

God: A person born between the years 1980 and 2000 who came of age in the new millennium.

Me: So the 18–36 year olds will find it trendy and start buying a lot of Bitcoin?

God: Yes, and as the price of Bitcoin rises more and more millennials will join in around the world.

Me: Hang on. Millennials are very tech savvy people so they will have no problem understanding the workings of Bitcoin.

God: Yes, it is the wave of the future.

Me: Sorry God...Gotta go.

God: Where?

God: Gotta go buy more Bitcoin!

End

Chapter 3

Roota's Teacher's Guide

Me: Let's talk about the Teacher's Guide for the Fed Boston comic book "Wishes and Rainbows."

God: You mean the secret plot behind the curtain of the Federal Reserve System on which you base the Road to Roota Theory?

Me: Yes. Is my theory correct? Does the Federal Reserve have a secret plan to destroy the un-backed fiat monetary system and return the United States to a true Gold Standard?

God: Yes, you are correct.

Me: I knew it!! I can't wait until the rest of the world finds out...it will blow their minds!

God: How so?

Me: Everyone is thinking that we are screwed. They think this evil cabal of Bad Guys is going to crash our system and institute their "One World Government" with Marshall Law and the total destruction of all our freedoms.

God: Yes, that was the plan of the Bad Guys.

Me: But they are failing right? The Good Guys are winning this final battle and we will soon be free.

God: Yes.

Me: So the Fed's Teacher's Guide really does lay out what's going on both in the "Wishes and Rainbows" comic and behind the scenes in the battle to remove the Bad Guys.

God: Of course it does. It even says so in the full name of the booklet: "The Road to Roota: A Teacher's Guide for Wishes and Rainbows."

Me: Amazing. It was this Teacher's Guide that helped me uncover all the secret meanings in the "Wishes and Rainbows" comic.

God: Interesting. Tell me about the things you discovered.

Me: Well, first there was the more obvious stuff like the need for scarcity when it comes to what we use for money. The Teacher's Guide even spells it out in simple terms on the first page: "One critical function that scarce commodities have often served is as commodity money."

God: Well there's a Red Flag if ever I saw one.

Me: I know. This is the Federal Reserve talking about the need for scarcity in money! The same Federal Reserve that produces the antithesis of commodity money - the un-backed fiat money - by the trillions!

God: Very true. Tell me more about the Teacher's Guide.

Me: Well, the very first page lists the economic themes that the "Wishes and Rainbows" comic addresses: scarcity, supply, demand and asset allocation. It explains how levels of supply and demand are supposed to translate into price discovery although the Fed seems to hedge this comment by saying "prices should begin to rise."

God: What do you mean by that?

Me: I mean that supply and demand no longer set the prices of REAL physical commodities that are traded. Our markets are rigged. The market riggers use massive artificial supplies of electronic commodities contracts to distort their prices. Futures, options, swaps and dozens of other artificial derivatives are distorting the prices of everything real. The silver market is a great example with over 500x the amount of derivatives traded compared to the actual physical metal.

God: But supply and demand ARE determining prices Bix.

Me: No God, derivatives are determining the prices. How in the world can you say that the price of real silver is determined by real supply and demand fundamentals?

God: That's not what I said. I said that supply and demand are determining prices and they are. Your problem is that you, and most of the world, have substituted the pricing of real physical silver for the pricing of silver derivatives. Silver derivatives are priced correctly through supply and demand on the COMEX exchange. It is the next step that holds the problem for physical silver, which is using the price of a virtual asset, a derivative, as a gauge for the price of a real asset, the physical metal.

Me: Ah, I see your point. So where is the price of physical silver determined? Which exchange should we trust to reflect the true Fair Market Value of Silver?

God: There is no true exchange trading of physical silver so there is no real price for it. There are only silver derivative exchanges.

Me: Wait. The CFTC says that London's LBMA was trading real physical silver.

God: No. They lied to everyone. The LBMA is not an actual exchange. It is an association with members that agree on prices within strict rules. Although they claim to trade in physical silver, the contract trade volumes tell a much different story.

Me: How so?

God: The LBMA claims to "transfer" over 100 Billion ounces of physical silver every year and yet there hasn't been 100B ounce of silver mined in the history of mankind. It is a silver derivative contract that is transferred; not physical silver.

Me: And the other silver exchanges? Are any of their price discovery mechanisms reflecting the true supply and demand of physical silver?

God: No, they all determine prices of silver derivatives.

Me: Wow. Now I know why the Fed used the word "should" begin to rise in the Teacher's Guide.

God: Yes. Tell me more about the other things you discovered in the Fed's Teacher's Guide.

Me: They talked about how in order to avoid hardships in times of stress governments may intervene and control the price of commodities.

God: It really says that?

Me: In so many words.

God: How many words?

Me: Well here's the exact wording from page 2: "On some occasions, such as during war, a government may decide that allowing prices to be set purely by supply and demand would cause intolerable hardship. It therefore intervenes in the distribution process, through either price controls or rationing."

God: Interesting. And of course you take that as meaning the government is rigging market prices of gold and silver.

Me: Of course I do. It says nothing about telling the public what they are doing or the tools the government uses to implement these price controls.

God: So say you.

Me: No...the Fed is saying it! Page 2 again: "It is an attempt to control demand because allowing prices to rise to equilibrium levels is deemed contrary to the national interest."

God: So it does. A dramatic rise in the prices of gold and silver would be "contrary to the national interest" since they are considered barometers for the value of the unbacked US Dollar. It seems you are correct. Well done, Bix!

Me: Thanks God.

God: You mentioned tools the government uses to control prices. What kinds of tools?

Me: Computers and derivatives! Remember the word Roota comes directly from the first computer programs written by Alan Greenspan in the 1960's. It stands for "rootA" and is the very basis of our entire electronic monetary system. Here's a graphic from one of the very first computer programming instruction guides from the 1970's on financial computing:

God: Yes, computers are very powerful tools when it comes to the electronic monetary system. They are the backbone and without computers and electronic information storing systems there would be no electronic assets.

Me: Yes, and it's where the name of the little girl in the comic comes from!

God: Is there anything else you gleaned from the Teacher's Guide?

Me: Yes, but there's too much to cover fully in this chapter.

God: Ok then...give me a short list of your top discoveries.

Me: Here you go:

1) The Teacher's Guide points out that the problem of fairly allocating assets to a society is the largest issue for a central banker.

2) Although the Fed has a brilliant way to reallocate money after the banks collapse (by using Social Security balances) they are unsure if the people will accept it.

3) The Fed points out that trade and Globalization will end with the crash of the system and they are unsure when or if other nations will begin trading with the United States in the future.

4) The Fed talks about different ways to mine the commodities we are going to use as money and believes there will be a debate as to whether or not the government should nationalize mines and commodity production or leave it in the hands of private enterprises.

5) The Fed talks about the potential need to substitute commodities (like silver) in industrial applications if the commodity becomes more valuable as money.

6) The Fed expects the population to migrate into mining areas after the return to commodity money as populations shift to where the most work is needed. (This makes sense after the need for the financial services offered today in major cities collapses with the crash of the banking system.)

7) The Fed alludes to my premise in the Road to Roota Theory that the massive gold discovery in the Grand Canyon in the early 1900's was the catalyst for the creation of the Federal Reserve System. Besides all the pictures of caves with gold in the comic book they hint at needing to slowly return to a Gold Standard in this statement on page 3:

“Wishes and Rainbows is the story of one society and its attempts to assimilate, with least disruption, a rare and much coveted new resource.”

There are dozens more tidbits I got from the Teacher's Guide and combining this information with what is in the “Wishes and Rainbows” comic and other outside sources I developed the Road to Roota Theory.

God: Very well. I'll accept all of your conclusions although...don't you think you are stretching the monetary metaphor a bit?

Me: Well, if I am then so is the Fed! The Teacher's Guide addresses that issue directly on page 7:

“Has this analysis of the social and economic implications of Wishes and Rainbows over-stretched the metaphor?”

God: Touché.

Chapter 4

Magic Markets

Me: I can't believe how irrational the financial markets are these days. It's insane!

God: How so?

Me: There is not one "Green Shoot" on the horizon and yet the stock market just keeps going up, the US Dollar is stable and gold and silver are held in check. Even after bad news the stock market quickly rallies and moves higher...and higher and higher and higher.

God: Ah, the beauty of market manipulation...Ain't it Grand?!

Me: Come on – let's get serious about this.

God: Sure. What's your question?

Me: It seems there have been more regulations and more crackdowns on the banks and financial companies that manipulate markets so I assumed they would back off their manipulative practices.

God: Yes, they did.

Me: But the stock markets keep rising and gold and silver haven't exploded upwards.

God: What were you expecting the markets to do when market manipulation ends?

Me: I was expecting the prices to revert to their true Fair Market Values, whatever they may be.

God: So you expected markets to move and yet that didn't seem to happen. What does that tell you?

Me: That the manipulation is not over.

God: Bravo! You are correct. It's not over. It is just being controlled and run by higher powers.

Me: Do you mean the Government?

God: Yes.

Me: How much are they manipulating the prices?

God: As much as necessary.

Me: Necessary for what?

God: As much as necessary to fulfill their duties.

Me: Huh? Fulfill the duties of lying and deceiving the world?

God: Yes.

Me: But what they are doing is totally illegal.

God: No. It is totally legal and it is in their job descriptions to make sure two things happen in all markets.

Me: What are those two things?

God: To maintain market stability and maintain investor confidence.

Me: That sounds so harmless and justifiable and yet to achieve these goals they have to lie, cheat and steal by rigging markets.

God: Yes. They have been charged with that exact duty.

Me: Hang on. Who are “they” and where did “they” get the authority to do what they are doing?

God: “They” are the President’s Working Group on Financial Markets and they get their power and authority from Executive Order 12631 as signed by President Ronald Reagan in 1988.

Me: I know about the Working Group that was set up after the Stock Market Crash of 1987. It consists of the US Treasury Secretary, the Fed Chairman, the SEC Chairman and the CFTC Chairman but I thought they just talked about potential problems and situations. Where do they get the authority to actively rig markets? Just because a US President signed an Executive Order does not give them any legal right to rig markets.

God: You are correct but the legal right to rig markets was already written into the law in the Gold Reserve Act of 1934.

Me: Do you mean the same Gold Reserve Act that confiscated the gold of the American Citizens?

God: Yes. Within the Gold Reserve Act there was a requirement to create the Exchange Stabilization Fund, which would be used to intervene in specific markets as the US Treasury saw fit. It's not a secret although what it does has been kept secret for over 80 years.

Me: Really? Some law that was created in the depths of the Great Depression is still in use today?

God: Laws do not go away through the passage of time. Laws that are created and approved by the US Congress can only be removed by an Act of Congress. The Gold Reserve Act is still the law of the land.

Me: So what are the specific markets that the Working Group can use the Exchange Stabilization Fund to rig?

God: The Gold Reserve Act authorized the US Treasury to deal in gold, foreign exchange, securities and instruments of credit.

Me: Wait! Isn't the term "financial security" defined as "Any tangible asset of any kind?"

God: Yes.

Me: Wow! So the US Treasury really does have the legal power to rig ANY MARKET.

God: Yes, but not only the power – it has the obligation to do just that.

Me: What do you mean, the obligation?

God: The goals and actions listed in Executive Order 12631 are "enhancing the integrity, efficiency, orderliness, and competitiveness of our Nation's financial markets and maintaining investor confidence" and to determine the "actions, including governmental actions under existing laws and regulations, that are appropriate to carry out these recommendations.”

Me: So the Working Group figures out what is needed to maintain “orderly markets” and “investor confidence” and then the US Treasury and Federal Reserve use the Exchange Stabilization Fund to rig the markets to maintain the status quo.

God: Correct. And don’t forget the other two members of the Working Group – the Chairmen of the SEC and CFTC.

Me: Yes! They do their assigned duties by making sure the official market rigging operations are NOT scrutinized by the regulatory bodies that are supposed to watch for such actions.

God: Yes, “maintaining market stability” is in their job descriptions as well.

Me: Sure – at the expense of others.

God: What do you mean by that?

Me: I mean for every winner there is a loser. For every market manipulation there are financial ramifications. Bubbles are blown bigger and capital is misallocated causing massive financial destruction because market distortions must find equilibrium at some point, correct?

God: Yes, at some point.

Me: When will it happen? I’ve been waiting for it and it never happens.

God: We’ve been through this. It will happen when you choose it to happen and, for whatever reason, you have not made that choice yet.

Me: Well I’m fed up with all this secret manipulation and fraud, legal or not.

God: Very well. Then end it.

Me: I will.

End

Chapter 5

The “Full Stop” Crash

Me: God, something has been on my mind about the plans of the Good Guys to destroy the current system.

God: What’s that?

Me: Well, from the conversations I’ve had with people high up the chain and from knowing the history of some of the Good Guys I think they want as FEW winners as possible when the crash hits.

God: That is correct. They believe that nobody should profit off the devastation that will be unleashed on the global economy.

Me: But how is that possible?

God: It's not possible. Someone always profits from crashes and calamities but they can limit the amount and types of profit extracted.

Me: How so?

God: There are many ways.

Me: Like what?

God: They can deny payouts on short positions. They can hold positions in place while surgically destroying certain "Bad Eggs" in the monetary game. They can even "FULL STOP" the system completely freezing prices and shutting down all exchanges.

Me: What do you mean "freezing prices?"

God: I mean just that, freezing prices. Keeping the price of mining stocks frozen at one place by not allowing trades or settlements even while the price of the physical commodity is skyrocketing.

Me: Well that's not fair.

God: It's their game and they write the rules. They can change the rules any time they wish. If you choose to play in their game you should expect them to turn towards self-preservation before paying out winning bets.

Me: But there are some people that will win. People who hold gold and silver coins in their own possession will win after the manipulation stops.

God: It depends what you call winning.

Me: What do you mean?

God: Would you consider it a win if the exchanges do not open up again and you no longer know the prices of gold and silver?

Me: Wait. Exchanges will open at some point – they have to get the economy started up again. In time they will all open up again.

God: All of them?

Me: Well, maybe not the derivative markets. People will have had enough of them for sure.

God: Which derivative market?

Me: All the derivative markets...I think.

God: Including the stock markets?

Me: No. That will obviously reopen. It's not a derivative market.

God: Are you sure?

Me: I think so. Well, maybe not strictly. Hmm, if I were to define a derivative as something that derives its value from something else then I guess the stock market is a derivative market as the stock represents partial ownership in the underlying companies.

God: And you yourself have said that the stocks have become “rehypothicated” many times over in High Frequency Trading and there are multiple claims on the same shares of stock.

Me: Wow! You are right! “Rehypothicated” is that new financial term meaning selling the same asset over and over again through the use of derivatives. The stock markets won't even open again because they are just as distorted as all the other derivative markets.

God: You are likely correct...at least for the foreseeable future.

Me: But surely the people that hold physical gold and silver coins in their own possession will win big time!

God: You just said that the exchanges would shut down so how would you know if your metal holdings are winners?

Me: At some point the true Fair Market Value of gold and silver will be known.

God: When? How much time would it take for you to consider that holding physical gold and silver coins was a smart idea - a “win?” Just a few weeks? A few months? How about ten years? Would that still be a win in your book?

Me: I guess I never thought about that.

God: You are basing your conclusions of winners and losers in a paradigm that will not exist after the banks crash. Everything will be different. The way the world sees everything will be destroyed and a new system will need to be created. How that turns out will be anyone’s guess.

Me: But we have the past to turn to. We have a history of unbacked currencies failing and the system returning to a gold and/or silver standard. We have a framework we can work from.

God: In the past there was never a full global abandonment of using gold and silver as money. They had always stayed circulating as money and to a much, much greater extent than is in circulation today. The only Global Currency prior to the current electronic monetary system was gold and silver. Most people still held their gold and silver coins even as unbacked fiat money grew in popularity. In every failed unbacked fiat scam of the past most people still held onto their gold and silver coins, just in case. Then, as each unbacked currency bubble popped, those that held onto their coins were very happy they did.

Me: But very few people hold gold and silver coins today.

God: True. Most have abandoned the metals as a form of money and now people will have to make the decision again about what to use for your next form of money.

Me: You are right. It won't be an obvious choice because most people don't hold any gold or silver coins. Holy crap! This will take years to sort out.

God: It could take quite a while.

Me: But if we have a banking crash we won't have years. We won't have weeks. Our economy only works at the hyper-speed in which we are living. There are no stockpiles of food or supplies stored up for the winter. That's not the way the Just-In-Time Delivery System works. Business deems supplies in inventory to be a costly waste of resources. Warehouses today are actually shipping containers en route to their destinations. Grocery stores need to be restocked every few days or they will run out of food. If this transition takes too long we are all TOTALLY SCREWED!

God: You may very well be. If your society cannot work together to sort out a way forward there is little hope for a smooth transition.

Me: I'm depressed.

God: Don't be. This is another reason you chose to experience life at this moment in time. Your personal future is no longer about exposing and tearing down the artificial structures of the past - it's about helping to build a new and sound structure to move forward.

Me: That sounds like a tall order.

God: It is, but it's another shot at greatness that should not be wasted. Do your best and I'm sure humanity will find a way forward.

Me: I believe you God.

God: Good.

Chapter 6

Firing the Nanny

Me: I can't wait to remove our controllers and finally take charge of our own lives.

God: Hang on Bix. You do not fully understand what your life will be like after the crash. It will be much, much harder - harder than you have ever had to face. Life for everyone will be very difficult.

Me: What? What do you mean? Life is almost impossible now living under the rule of our oppressors.

God: Ha! You've had it easy compared to what lies directly in front of you.

Me: I don't believe you. I equate the destruction of the Bad Guys to getting out of prison after being locked up for decades. We are liberating ourselves!

God: This is true but a better analogy and a better way to look at it is that you are firing your abusive nanny. Yes, you will no longer be subject to the vastly manipulated world that you were presented with but you are also no longer going to receive the help you have relied on your whole life.

Me: What kind of help are you talking about?

God: Help with everything. You have leaned on your controllers for everything. They were in charge of all aspects of your life – the good and the bad.

Me: I don't see any good that they did. What is good about what we have now?

God: They have provided much more than you realize.

Me: Like what?

God: Like food, clothing, shelter, health care, security and education, the air that you breathe and the water that you drink....need I go on?

Me: Um...sure.

God: They settled legal disputes, protected the environment, developed energy sources and entertained you with music, television, movies and video games...you want more?

Me: I guess so.

God: They protected your rights, your property and your assets. You gave them the power to run your economy, stimulate your economic growth and control and allocate your money.

Me: Hang on God. Those are all the things I hate about our controllers. They have used and abused all those things to the detriment of humanity. Those are the reasons WHY we are Firing Our Nanny!

God: I know they are and I commend you on making such a bold decision, but now the burden must be placed on your own shoulders. You will need to figure out how to deal with all these issues as you move forward. The removal of your controllers leaves you with little or no infrastructure or protection.

Me: Hmm. I get that the transition won't be easy but I really think that we will end up with much better ways to deal with all the problems and issues in life.

God: Perhaps that is true but are you sure you are up for the challenge?

Me: I think so.

God: You'd better "know so" since removing your controllers will throw everyone into the fire at the same time.

Me: Well we have delayed this transition for over 100 years and it only gets harder and harder to take out our controllers. What else can we do?

God: You can ready your mind, body and soul for the change. You can either fight it or go with it. Be open for change and don't be stuck in your ways. Things that once made perfect sense to you will no longer be relevant. You must open your mind to change because that's exactly what's headed your way. EVERYTHING will change very soon.

Me: I guess so but I already knew that. I've been talking and writing about it for over a decade.

God: No, Bix. You have talked about changing how the old system operates. You railed against the system and you fought for what you thought was right.

Me: And what's wrong with that?

God: Nothing. You have done a fine job at exposing the problems of the past. But the future is not the past. The future will look NOTHING like the past. All the systems and controls you fought against will be brought down and you will have to forge a NEW future with totally new systems and controls.

Me: Hang on. Why can't we just fix the problems with our old system and move on?

God: Because there are no quick fixes to the old system. The old system functioned smoothly based on fraud and deception. It's the only reason it functioned at all. Without the fraud and deception controlling and regulating the inner workings the entire system will fail.

Me: So without the lying, cheating bastards, the old system won't work at all.

God: That is correct.

Me: Then what the hell can we do? I'm sorry for getting angry God but if we can't fix the old system and we don't have a new system, aren't we totally screwed?

God: You must make your way by being open to change. Changing your steadfast beliefs about how your society should function is the only way to create a new system that works. Without being open to new ideas and "strange" concepts you will be stuck in the old system with the same old problems.

Me: Ok. What else?

God: It's simple:

You must take responsibility for your own lives.

You must expand your understanding.

And most of all...you must evolve.

Me: Ok then; I guess we have no choice if we want to get out from where we are.

Where shall we start?

End

Chapter 7

The End of Banks

Me: Many people are talking about how the banks are about to declare a bank holiday so they can recapitalize and start fresh. Is this true?

God: Yes, that's what the banks want.

Me: Interesting. How long will it take for the banks to reopen if this happens?

God: They won't.

Me: What do you mean?

God: I mean they won't. They will have lost the faith of the people and they will suffer the consequences of their failed business models.

Me: You mean they won't be bailed out this time.

God: No. They won't be bailed out.

Me: So what happens then? Are we talking "bail-ins?"

God: No, there will be no bail-ins.

Me: So if they don't get bailed out and they can't engineer a bail-in then what will happen?

God: They will not reopen and everyone will have to move forward as best they can.

Me: Hang on God. Our society relies 100% on the banking system for everything from power to energy to food - even for our security. If the banks go down then they have to be brought back up.

God: It is your choice. Do you think the people will choose to bailout the banks or have their assets cut in half through bail-ins?

Me: No way! We have learned too much about these criminals since the last bailout to EVER let that happen again.

God: I thought so. So what's the plan Bix? If you aren't going to bailout the banks then your world stops in its tracks. No food, no water, no transportation...not even your beloved internet will function without banks; all internet service providers and power suppliers need operational banks to provide their service.

Me: You are right, but if we can't bailout the banks then there must be a replacement for the banks.

God: Now you are on the right track. Who could replace private banks?

Me: Our Government! They will have to take the place of private banks.

God: That is the most likely outcome.

Me: But that's scary too because I don't trust our government at all.

God: That is why the Good Guys are trying to replace the current government with a new one. That is why the political parties are being torn apart. It is time for new, transparent and trustworthy leadership in America. It's time to take our country back.

Me: I think it's just about time too.

God: It is past the time but bravo for finally getting around to it.

Me: But whatever new government we end up with will be facing a monumental task getting the banking system up and running again. Are there plans in place for this part of the transition?

God: Yes, there are plans but the majority of the People may not accept them.

Me: But we have to accept the plan. We can't delay on this plan since it will mean total chaos. We rely way too heavily on the banking system and it's not something that you can just turn off overnight.

God: Then you'd better start uniting the people now.

Me: That's exactly what I am doing.

God: It's going to be a huge task with low odds for success.

Me: That's such a defeatist thing to say.

God: That is reality. You need to fully understand what you are up against if you expect to have any chance of being successful.

Me: I guess so. It just seems that we are biting off more than we can chew.

God: Would you like to keep things the same? Do you want the same people controlling every aspect of your life?

Me: God No! Nothing can be worse than the direction our country is headed.

God: Very well then, stop being such a crybaby and change it!

Me: I'm on it.

End

Chapter 8

Trump/Sanders Ticket...What If?

Me: I've had the strangest thought running through my head all day.

God: Tell Me.

Me: What if Donald Trump and Bernie Sanders joined forces and ran on the same Presidential Ticket?

God: Interesting thought. Go on.

Me: I know it sounds absolutely absurd because they are polar opposites, but what if, for the good of uniting the Nation, they shook hands and decided to run together?

God: They are not as opposite as you think, Bix.

Me: What do you mean?

God: Although Trump is running as a Republican he never really was one. He had always been more of an Independent with Libertarian tendencies. It was only after he decided to run for President that he joined the Republican Party in order to have a legitimate chance of winning.

Me: That's right!

God: And Sanders was always more of an Independent with many Libertarian ideologies but is running for the Presidency under the Democratic Party in order to spread his message to more people in the United States.

Me: And neither is loved by either Political Party's leaders or controllers.

God: Correct. Due to the two-party political system it was the only way either candidate would have any chance of being heard on the National Stage for any possibility of winning the US Presidential Election.

Me: Interesting. One thing is for sure, they BOTH tore down the facade of fairness in the two-party system. I doubt either party will remain in tact after being exposed as being totally and completely corrupt. It's all over the news that "We the People" have no real say in who gets the nomination. Truthfully, I don't even think it matters which party wins since the same people end up controlling the same agenda from behind the scenes.

God: You are correct. The two-party system is in its final days and along with it will go your controllers.

Me: Wow! Finally! The United States of America was created as a Republic where the Rights of the individuals have all the power and not as a Democracy where the desires of the majority supersede the Rights of the individual. These controllers have used the two-party system to divide us into two ideologies for over a hundred years!

God: Yes, and your country has never been more divided than it is today. It is divided socially, culturally and economically.

Me: I know. I am very scared that my country will not survive the coming economic and social chaos. People in the United States take it for granted that our country will stay "One Nation Under God" forever. They never think it can end but it can.

God: Yes, Bix. Everything ends.

Me: And this Primary Election process has been as ugly and divisive as we have ever seen with all sides vowing to wreak havoc should their candidate not be chosen fairly.

God: Americans are a strong and independent group of people who have been taught to fight for what they want and what they think is right. Some will tear down anything to see their vision of the United States come to pass.

Me: But I don't want anyone to tear down the United States. I love my country and I don't want to stand by and watch it destroyed.

God: Then don't. You always have a choice.

Me: That's Right! Just as we have discussed throughout our other "Conversations." We can always change how things turn out by changing the decisions we make.

God: Yes, your experience on Earth is all up to you. You are creating it through your thoughts, choices and actions and they manifest into your future.

Me: I understand that. The future is not set. It is ours to create and experience. Literally, the world is our canvas.

God: Yes! So what Road do you think you should take now to help you get to where you want to be?

Me: I know it sounds crazy given where we are today, but I think a Trump/Sanders Presidential Ticket would have the power to unite the conflicting ideologies. Imagine the radical left and the radical right shaking hands and vowing to work together to foster the kind of unity needed to get through the economic and social challenges directly ahead of us.

God: Sounds like a very different Road for the people of the United States of America to take.

Me: I guess so because it's hard to see where our States are "United" these days! But that's what I want to happen and these changing times require unique and creative solutions.

God: As you choose. Tell me more about your thoughts on a Trump/Sanders Ticket.

Me: First of all it would unite the fringes of America, the far left and the far right, since that's where the real danger lies. Their wills and steadfast ideologies will foster tremendous social unrest if they are disenfranchised in this election process. I don't think our Nation will survive one ideology winning over the other this time.

God: It may not.

Me: So we must come together for the good of our country. I think if Trump and Sanders can work together to find compromises and synergies then they would set a great example for the rest of us. There doesn't have to be a winner and a loser. We are "One Nation Under God" and we can all win if we recognize that there is room for all people and all ideologies in a true Republic.

God: It was true at the founding of your Nation and it can be true today.

Me: That's right! If the two radical factions in the current Presidential Race can show they can work together then those in the middle will come along for the ride. They will feel America coming together on the things that once divided us. They will be caught up in a strong sense of Nationalism we always seem to muster at times of trouble.

God: I can feel the American Spirit rising already.

Me: And the best part - a Trump/Sanders Ticket would win the election by a landslide over Hillary Clinton and her "Bad Guy" controllers. Truthfully, both Trump and Sanders have enough of the popular vote to win the election over Clinton or any other establishment candidate on their own.

God: Yes, but if only one of them won the election the supporters of the losing side will feel angry and disenfranchised.

Me: That's why it needs to be a joint effort. If they unite there wouldn't be the kind of social chaos that may have ensued if only one of these radical candidates is elected. Both sides will be represented to such an extent that neither side will feel totally disenfranchised.

God: That is true but explain how the two ideologies could work together.

Me: I have thought about that issue. Yes, many of their ideas are polar opposites from social reforms to immigration reforms to economic and monetary policies. Total opposites.

God: That is true.

Me: But like you said, they are not that far apart on many things. Maybe they can come together by starting where there are similarities. Wait. What are those similarities anyway?

God: They both want radical change in the current system and have strikingly similar plans for health care, tax reform, trade, campaign finance reform, and gun control.

Me: Really? They have that much in common?

God: Yes, that and they have one very important thing that has the power to unite your Nation once again - they both love their country with a sincere and honest passion.

Me: True. Neither seem to be out for power or glory. Bernie just wants to help the poor and needy and Trump already has all the power and fame he desires.

God: So how do you intend to get these two powerful forces united onto one ticket?

Me: One way would be if both the Republicans and the Democrats nominate a candidate that did NOT win the popular vote but instead used delegates that are party loyalists to vote for their hand picked candidates.

God: That would not sit well with the people.

Me: Correct and it would leave Trump and Sanders and their devotees desperate to tear down the corrupt system. Joining forces would do just that.

God: And what if that doesn't happen?

Me: I think the circumstances I discuss in my Road to Roota Theory will bring them together and force them to see the necessity of uniting their campaigns.

God: What kind of circumstances?

Me: In the Road to Roota Theory, the plan proposed by Roota (aka Alan Greenspan) was to run the monetary printing presses to infinity, soaking up all the benefits of unbacked fiat money before destroying the US Dollar and returning to a true Gold Standard. It's the reason politicians and central bankers in the United States continually talk of balancing budgets and raising interest rates but never actually do. The plan is not to save the unbacked fiat system but to exploit it for its benefits and ultimately destroy it. It was always the plan and, interestingly enough, both Trump and Sanders have plans that will do just that.

God: What plans are those?

Me: Sanders wants to redistribute wealth by offering to pay for everyone's "free ride." He vows to fully fund all social programs, tear down the big banks and Wall Street and ultimately redistribute the wealth of the Nation. Trump, on the other hand, wants to renegotiate the US debt payment terms by lowering interest payments and extending the duration of the debt. Basically, he suggests defaulting on the US debt since all holders of US bonds and securities will be paid back LESS than what they were promised.

God: Interesting but how would those positions unite Trump and Sanders?

Me: Both of their plans would instigate the Global Monetary Meltdown that has been long predicted. Holders of US debt would be sellers all at once destroying the US Debt Markets and destroying the US Dollar. Meanwhile the Federal Reserve will continue to print more and more unbacked fiat money to “paper over” the problems. Ultimately, the "Too Big To Fail" banks will fail causing all other banks to implode as people rush to get their money out of the system. When everyone loses their life savings and has no way to conduct even the most basic societal functions, radical solutions will become acceptable. Voila...the Trump/Sanders Ticket!

God: Interesting way to play your cards in this game.

Me: As I discuss in my previous books, it was always the plan of the United States to destroy the unbacked fiat monetary system when it was no longer working to our advantage. It is exactly what Greenspan and the "Good Guys" planned to do and we are now living the End Game of their master plan.

God: There will be a lot of hatred focused towards the United States and those that caused the crash to happen.

Me: Yes...namely the bankers, the politicians, the corrupt corporations and the people that control it all from behind the scenes. "We the People" will be demanding retribution against these criminals but we will also need a way forward - a way out of the mess.

God: Interesting that you think blame is necessary.

Me: I do. The people that have controlled this system our entire lives have abused us on every level and they need to be held accountable. In my book this is non-negotiable.

God: Very well, that is your choice. What's your plan to move forward "After the Crash?"

Me: We will need strong leaders and a plan to move forward. We will all need to rally around our leaders and we will need to unite not as a social class or around an ideology but around our Nation -- unite around the United States of America.

God: Although it may seem otherwise, the American Spirit is alive and well and just needs a Righteous Cause to rally behind.

Me: I have a sneaking suspicion that the Trump/Sanders Presidential Ticket may already be part of the "Good Guys" plan. Am I right?

God: Stranger things have happened.

Me: Hang on. I've been down this Road before, God. I thought that Ron Paul was going to become the President in prior Presidential Elections since he was chosen by the "Good Guys" but look how that turned out.

God: Yes, let's look at how that turned out. Tens of millions of people were shaken from their slumber to the virtues of his message of Independence and Freedom and most of all Liberty. The youth especially were awakened and now they are not young anymore. They have a strong voice and will use it when the time is right.

Me: But Ron Paul didn't win the nomination. He failed in uniting the left and the right so he never gained the kind of popular support he needed to push forth his vision for the United States. Many of us had hoped he was the answer.

God: I can see the problem right there. YOU must be the answer. YOU must decide who your leaders will be and how your future will unfold. If Ron Paul had the right message at the right time then YOU should have championed it.

Me: But I did and we came so close! The Republican Party Establishment pulled out all the stops and used every dirty trick in the book to defeat him. It was heartbreaking.

God: And where is this Republican Party Establishment now?

Me: Ah...it has been destroyed! Both the Republican and Democratic Establishment Parties have been exposed as a rigged game with candidates handpicked by the leaders of each party. The People now know that their vote has never really counted. This really is the End of the two-party system in the United States!

God: Yes, it is. Now do you see a path forward?

Me: Yes, potentially.

God: Hang on, Bix. This is your experience and you need to make firm choices. Answer my question with what you choose to do.

Me: Ok then -- YES! I want Trump and Sanders to run on the same ticket in order to unify my country through the upcoming chaos. I want the two-party election process to go away and I want to return to a way of living that is in line with our Founding Fathers principals of Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness.

God: Very well then. Congratulations on choosing a path forward.

Me: Thank you God but what will happen to our country if we fail to unite?

God: Do you really want to know?

End

A special note to those of you that think they can never vote for Bernie because he is a "Commie Socialist" or never vote for Donald because he is a "Capitalist Pig"...*

Are you sure you are willing to sacrifice your Country for your steadfast beliefs?

The Choice is Yours.

Chapter 9

Shrinking Government

Me: God, what will happen to the United States after the crash?

God: Your country is about to go through a dramatic change.

Me: How dramatic?

God: The United States of America will no longer be United under a Federal Government. It will be divided into various independent states and self-governing areas.

Me: What? I thought that the playing out of the Road to Rوتا Theory would restore our country – not destroy it.

God: The Principles of your country will be restored – not the massive structural foundation of your Federal Government.

Me: Why is that?

God: You can't afford it.

Me: Oh, you mean after the crash we will not be able to print and borrow money to run our federal government. It's a money issue not a government issue.

God: It's both. Yes, it is a money issue. Although the United State will have no more debt after the crash it will have many obligations to its people and no way to fund them.

Me: I thought we had all that hidden gold in the ground.

God: You do, but it's the people's gold. Do you think the people will want to spend it on rebuilding a huge federal government meant to rekindle their quest to interfere in their lives?

Me: Not a chance. I agree that the majority of the US Federal Government should be shuttered. What will happen to all those jobs though? I mean, we're talking about hundreds of thousands of people looking for work.

God: Try tens of millions.

Me: What? I thought the Federal Government only had about 3 million employees. Surely we will need most of them to fulfill their duties to keep things running. Where do you get "tens of millions?"

God: Although the official number of Federal Government employees is just below 3 million there are also many other jobs that owe their existence directly to the Federal Government. Postal workers, military personnel, contractors, free-lance workers, grantees, bailed-out businesses, civil servants, educators, firefighters and police officers that are wholly or partially employed by the Federal Government; so the number is actually 10x the size of the official 3 million figure.

Me: Wow. Over 30 Million people work for the federal government. That's huge. That is one in six workers in the United States working in some capacity for the Federal Government!

God: Yup.

Me: But the federal government was never supposed to be that big. As a matter of fact, the Federal Government was only supposed to have limited powers. It says so in the US Constitution. Here's the full list of the Federal Government's legal responsibilities:

- 1) Defense, war prosecution, peace, foreign relations, foreign commerce, and interstate commerce.*
- 2) The protection of citizens' constitutional rights (e.g the right to vote) and ensuring that slavery remains illegal.*
- 3) Establishing federal courts inferior to the Supreme Court.*
- 4) Copyright protection.*
- 5) Coining money.*
- 6) Establishing post offices and post roads.*
- 7) Establishing a national set of universal weights and measures.*
- 8) Taxation needed to raise revenue to perform these essential functions.*

These are the ONLY responsibilities given to the federal government and the rest is specifically delegated to the individual state governments and legislatures.

God: You are correct.

Me: So if we go back to our Constitutional form of government what will happen to these jobs and the workers?

God: The vast majority of them will not be necessary since most of the duties taken over by the Federal Government in the last 100 years were not within the guidelines of the US Constitution.

Me: Well there's another problem right there – what will all these people do for a living? How will they feed themselves and pay their bills? Are we going to be a nation of jobless and homeless beggars?

God: I tell you that your whole system is about to be thrown up in the air and you are worried about NOT having JOBS for people to do?! Are you crazy?! There's a massive amount to do to get back on your feet. Jobs will not be a problem.

Me: Hmm. I guess money won't be a problem either because there will be no more debt after the banks implode. Nobody will have to work 3 jobs just to pay your monthly bills.

God: That is correct and there will be no mortgage or rent payments.

Me: Hang on. You mean people will just own their house outright? No more mortgage or bank debt whatsoever?

God: That is correct. The banks never earned the money to purchase the house in the first place. They “loaned it into existence” so it's yours.

Me: But how will homeowners get the title to their houses signed over by the banks?

God: Why would they need it?

Me: In case the bank wants to foreclose on their house.

God: But there will be no banks after the crash. They will have destroyed themselves and all means of payment goes with them. All their assets, all their debts and all they hold over your head – gone.

Me: Interesting. It gets pretty darn complicated though for property owners and renters. How will all that be settled?

God: It will be settled in whatever manner the people involved wish to settle it. It's all up to you and your individual circumstances.

Me: But what if someone has a greedy landlord who demands the rent originally agreed upon? What happens then?

God: Then there is a discussion and negotiation.

Me: But the law is on the landlords side...isn't it? I mean, he still owns the building.

God: Are you sure? Did they ever own the home if it was purchased with borrowed money from a bank that didn't have the money in the first place? Is there still a deed to the property and if there is, where is it? Most likely it was sucked into the giant derivative funnel of Mortgage Backed Securities never to be seen or heard from again.

Me: What a mess.

God: The mess has already destroyed the proper functioning of the entire economy. It is just hidden from those who still believe that the system functions properly. Don't think there will be the types of systems in place to remove a tenant in the new world. It's up to you.

Me: Hang on, if the landlord can't prove ownership of the house how can he demand rent from someone? And if he could prove he is the owner, would there even be the infrastructure of courts and police and process servers that it takes to evict people?

God: Like I said, you will find yourself in a new world after the collapse of the Fiat Monetary System.

Me: It just seems so foreign to me...like something isn't right about it.

God: Something isn't right about Freedom?

Me: What do you mean about “Freedom?”

God: You are not used to being Free - Free to live as you wish without the constraints of debt or repression or personal restrictions – so it feels strange. That’s what Freedom feels like and you will get used to it over time.

Me: It’s going to be weird.

God: No Bix. What you are living under NOW is weird. What is approaching is what you should have had all along.

Me: Will I like it? I mean after the fear of it all subsides, will I like my new found freedom?

God: No...you will LOVE it.

Me: Awesome.

God: Very awesome.

Chapter 10

Inalienable Rights

Me: I had a dream last night about my inalienable rights.

God: I know Bix. You are figuring out what you really are.

Me: It seems so.

God: Tell me about your dream.

Me: It was strange. It started out about my son who is currently struggling with deciding whether to go to college or to follow his passion of becoming a professional soccer player.

God: A “Footballer” as they say everywhere else in the world.

Me: Yes, football because it’s played with your feet!

God: Still haven't heard a good explanation as to why it was changed in the United States.

Me: Well if you don't know there must not be a good explanation!

God: True.

Me: Anyway, somehow in the dream it came down to a discussion with a college admissions official about what my son's rights were. He told me that there are strict rules as to what my son is and is not allowed to do as far as playing soccer in Europe.

God: Go on.

Me: They tried to tell me that he had no rights other than that those they had given him. I argued that they were wrong and that they had no power to put constraints on his "inalienable rights," as given to him by God at birth. Is this true?

God: This is your experience Bix. Does it sound true?

Me: Yes, it does.

God: Then it is.

Me: But that's when I woke up and realized the rules that are being put in place by my country NOW are all constricting and nullifying my "inalienable rights"...the rights that should not and cannot be taken away.

God: It was the construct of your experience that all people have the right to live as they wish as long as they don't impede on other people's rights to live as they choose.

Me: So all these rules and regulations our government is creating are all way out of bounds as they end up impeding upon my rights.

God: For the most part, yes.

Me: But when did I give up my rights and become subject to the edicts of my government? I don't remember signing away my rights.

God: You never did – at least not consciously.

Me: What do you mean?

God: There have been documents and agreements that you have signed that have slowly given away your rights. Documents such as home mortgages, driver's licenses, employment applications...all have hidden passages that those who wish to control you will claim surrender your inalienable rights.

Me: But that's not true is it?

God: No but if need be they will argue in court that you were of sound mind when you transferred over your rights.

Me: But I never knowingly transferred over ANYTHING.

God: That is correct and that should be your argument. It is built into your laws that anyone that enters into a contract with another must fully understand the implications and ramifications of the terms of the contract. This is a safeguard against the very fraud that your elected officials are currently perpetrating.

Me: Interesting.

God: And you can argue something stronger.

Me: What is that?

God: The only purpose of Government in the United States is to protect people's inalienable rights: Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness.

Me: If that's the only purpose of our Government then they are majorly screwing up!

God: Not only screwing up – they took an Oath of Office to uphold these rights for the sake of the People. You never took an oath to uphold the rights of the Government to subject you to their will.

Me: What about the Pledge of Allegiance that we were all forced to say everyday in grade school? Is that not a pledge to my country?

God: No. Listen to the words carefully.

“I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.”

Me: Wow! I am not pledging allegiance to my country but rather to our “Flag” and our “Republic for which it stands.” I don't say anything about our new “democracy” or the government officials that run it.

God: Correct. You have not given up your inalienable rights because they are NOT yours to give up nor are they for the taking by anyone.

Me: Hang on, it is “inalienable” or “unalienable” rights?

God: It's both. Inalienable was used in the writing of the US Declaration of Independence but unalienable means the exact same thing...“That which cannot be taken away or denied.”

Me: But I can willfully give up my rights can't I? I mean, it must be my right, by definition, to give up my inalienable rights. Not that I would or anything.

God: Yes, but it is also your Right to take them back so they truly are inalienable.

Me: Wow! This all gets back to the 2nd paragraph of the Declaration of Independence:

“We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.--That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, --That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.”

God: It was very well written.

Me: I can't believe how powerful this passage feels to me right now.

God: Yes, these words become more and more meaningful the closer the people that control you come to taking away your inalienable rights.

Me: We have to stop them! We have to stop them NOW!

God: That is in your hands Bix. It is the job of the sovereign citizen to remove their government when they get out of hand. The ball is in your court.

Me: I know and I will NOT say that I can't do it myself. Everybody says that when confronted with this kind of undertaking. It turns into a self-fulfilling prophecy when everyone says, “You can't fight City Hall.”

God: Yes it does. And yes, you can take on this fight. You must. All human beings have the right of self-determination. The right to live their lives without others forcing their will upon them. It is not the desire of your soul to live any other way.

Me: I understand now. This existence is my construct and I get to make the rules that govern my experience.

God: Yes, everybody does.

Me: And as long as my wishes and desires don't stop other people from living the way they want to live I should be able to do whatever I want, whenever I want.

God: Yes - as long as your desires don't limit or obstruct others in doing the same.

Me: That's so liberating!

God: Yes. That is what Liberty is all about. It is Freedom from the control, wishes and desires of others.

Me: Wow! It's such a powerful word.

God: Yes, it's your "Get Out of Jail Free" card. It should be at the tip of your tongue when fighting for your freedom as Liberty is the most sacred of the inalienable rights. It knows no rulers and it knows no kings. It knows no borders and it knows no country. It is the essence of your existence and it must be defended at all costs for in a life without Liberty you can never experience your true self.

Me: What do you mean?

God: Living within the rules and constraints of others is not what you choose to experience in life. It is the antithesis of your reasons to be here. Without the ability to fully experience life on your own terms, you experience less than you could have without the constraints.

Me: But what if my chosen experience INCLUDES these restraints? What if this is the battle I have come to experience?

God: Now you've got it!! For you, Bix, this is exactly why you are here. To fight the fight for Liberty! Now go do it.

Me: Cool. It sounds so...Patriotic.

God: Don't you think there was a reason you were born on the 4th of July?

Me: Ah. I guess so. Thank you for that. It's a great birthday to have.

God: Thank yourself. You chose that day.

Me: Very well, but thank you for being here for me, for us, at this moment in time.

God: I am always here for you. All you have to do is ask for me and you will feel that I am with you.

Me: That is very comforting.

END

Chapter 11

God's Diet Plan

Me: I've got a strange question, God.

God: Strange for you or strange for me?

Me: Strange for our conversations I guess.

God: Interesting. Not sure why you think anything would be strange to talk about with me but go ahead.

Me: Um, what's the best way to deal with my recent weight gain? I've put on about 20 pounds since I got married and I don't like being this large. I have much less energy and it doesn't feel good.

God: That's not a strange question at all. It's something you've been struggling with for a while so there is obviously a bigger issue underlying your problem.

Me: How so?

God: Remember, you chose this experience so you chose this as one of your problems to deal with. If you are not happy with the way things are going you can choose to change them. That goes for everything from solving the monetary problems of the world to losing 20 pounds and everything in between.

Me: I see. So if I feel like I want to lose this extra weight it means it was one of the obstacles I gave myself to learn a lesson in life?

God: It seems so.

Me: What's the lesson?

God: Only you can answer that one since you gave yourself this problem.

Me: You're right.

God: So what's the lesson?

Me: Well, it seems that throughout my life I have lost weight when I was not in a relationship but wanted one. It must be some kind of natural and instinctual response when trying to attract a mate in life.

God: Ha! This is not Wild Kingdom, Bix. You make the choices, not Mother Nature.

Me: Oops. I guess I was trying to blame some outside force for my own issue with weight fluctuation.

God: Yes, you were...I guess we can call that lesson number one in God's Diet Plan: "Don't blame anyone but yourself."

Me: Point taken but why is it that I gain so much weight when I get in a relationship?

God: Let's flesh this one out. How do you act when you are in a good relationship?

Me: I'm happy! I want to spend time with my new love. I want to do fun things and things that we can enjoy together.

God: Ah...Party Time!

Me: Yes! It feels great to be in a fun and loving relationship and I forget about all the heartache and pain that goes along with not being in a good relationship.

God: And there's lesson number two: "Don't be an extremist" with anything. Take all things in moderation and you won't lose sight of either side of the issue.

Me: I guess that goes for the amount of food and drink that I consume as well.

God: Of course. All things in moderation and you will balance your life.

Me: But you know me God – I take everything to the extreme!

God: Yes, you do Bix. And how's that working out for you?

Me: Lot's of highs and lows.

God: Is it serving you well in your life?

Me: Not really. I mean the highs are great but the lows really suck.

God: And would you be willing to sacrifice the extreme highs if you could eliminate the extreme lows?

Me: I think I would because the highs don't seem to last too long and the lows seem to last forever!

God: And there is lesson number three: "There is balance somewhere in the middle."

Me: Interesting. So you are saying I shouldn't go to the extreme in any direction because it will sacrifice something at the other side of the equation.

God: Yes.

Me: Wow! I can apply that to so many things in my life from relationships to work to even my obsessive daily struggles to expose the manipulation of silver!

God: Yup.

Me: I can even apply it to my current weight struggles. I shouldn't starve myself when I feel I need to go on a diet and I shouldn't eat everything in sight just because I'm feeling good and having a good time.

God: Now you are getting it.

Me: I guess so but I really want my weight to be gone.

God: You want to disappear?

Me: What? What are you talking about?

God: You just said you want your weight to be gone. If your weight is gone you will have zero physical presence.

Me: Very funny. What I meant was that I want all the extra weight that I've gained to be gone.

God: Ah - clarity. You need to be specific when you talk about these goals of yours. I understand that you want the extra weight gone but you have not specified how much weight and in what timeframe you would like to lose it.

Me: So if I set specific goals I can achieve them? Any goal at all?

God: Yes, any goal at all.

Me: Fine. I want to lose 20 pounds by next week. Ha! Gotcha God!

God: Very well, chop off your right arm and get back to me next week with another goal you want to achieve.

Me: Gees, God. Don't get so huffy. I was just joking.

God: I get that Bix but if you really want to achieve your goals you need to understand there is a process and that process is the key to every lesson in life.

Me: What do you mean that the process is the key?

God: If you want to achieve any goal in life 99.9% of the lesson learned is not in getting to the finish line but rather what you learned in order to get there. It's the step-by-step process of living and experiencing life that is important. If goals and desires were automatically achieved the very moment they popped into your head what would be the reason for living in the first place?

Me: Ah, back to the Ying-and-Yang thing again, right? Without bad there can be no understanding of good. Without fear there can be no understanding of courage. Without hate there can be no understanding of love.

God: Yes, and there is lesson number four: “The PROCESS of achieving goals is actually the REAL goal...not the end result.”

Me: So if it's all about the process then I should set all kinds of goals along the way to remind me that the process is the important part.

God: And how would achieving a lot of little goals make you feel?

Me: I'd feel happy that I was getting somewhere.

God: And there we have the fifth and final lesson: “Set achievable goals that make you happy.”

Me: So I guess that's God's Diet Plan:

“Don't blame anyone but yourself.”

“Don't be an extremist”

“There is balance somewhere in the middle.”

“The process of achieving goals is the REAL goal...not the end result.”

“Set achievable goals that make you happy.”

God: Sounds good to me. So how do you feel about what you called a “strange question” when we started this conversation a few moments ago?

Me: I feel really good. What started off as a silly question about getting diet tips from God turned into another one of Life's Lessons.

God: Strange how that happens.

Me: Will that happen if I ask you other strange questions?

God: Most likely. If you think things are strange there is usually an underlying issue behind the feeling. Don't be afraid to ask me anything.

Me: Anything at all?

God: Anything.

End

Chapter 12

Guns, Guns and More Guns

Me: Alright then God; are you pro-guns or anti-guns?

God: There is nothing wrong with guns if used for the proper purpose.

Me: And what purpose would that be.

God: To protect yourself from others who try to stop you from exercising your Free Will.

Me: Not sure what you mean by “exercising my Free Will.”

God: Everybody has the right to experience life here on Earth as they choose as long as they do not hamper or block another person from doing the same. Free Will is essential to the human experience and a gun can protect your Free Will.

Me: But that doesn't mean you should kill anyone does it?

God: If another person is infringing upon your Free Will, a gun will go a long way to protect it.

Me: So I should shoot someone that messes with my Free Will? That doesn't sound right.

God: The majority of the time there is no need to shoot a gun at all. Just the presence is enough for someone else to get the message that you are serious about protecting yourself.

Me: Is that why our founding Fathers put "the right to bare arms" clause in our Constitution?

God: In a way, yes, because that specific clause was put into the Constitution to stop your Government or any other Government from infringing upon your Free Will.

Me: What do you mean "our government?" How would my having a gun stop my government from doing anything? They have an army. They can make me do whatever they want if they use force. They can even take away my Free Will.

God: No, they can't. Not with the amount of guns in the hands of the people of the United States. There are too many guns spread throughout the public for ANY government or nation to enforce the removal of people's free will.

Me: So all those who are claiming that the Government is going to declare Marshall Law and take all the guns away from the people are wrong?

God: Yes, they are all wrong. Government cannot force its will over the people of the United States in an overt way while the people are armed. There are just too many people in the United States willing to fight and die for their ideals.

Me: What if they take our guns away? They are always saying they are going to start making guns and ammunition illegal. It's all over the news every time there is a mass shooting even though they are all likely False Flag Attacks. Right after the incident they come on the news and say they are going to pass laws to stop gun violence from ever causing such heart breaking drama ever again in America.

God: And what happens after that?

Me: What do you mean?

God: What happens after they announce that they are going to take away the guns and ammunition?

Me: Truthfully, people rush to buy guns! They think they only have a limited time to buy them so gun and ammo sales go through the roof after every mass shooting.

God: And what happens to those new strict laws that were supposed to "take the guns away?"

Me: Hmm. I don't know.

God: I'll tell you...they are stashed away in a drawer of some Congressman who will pull out the very same laws and language when the next mass shooting hits.

Me: That's just the gun lobby shutting it down and inept Congressmen who are bought off at every turn.

God: No Bix. It's all part of the plan to ARM America to protect the people from both their government and their government controllers. It is all done on purpose to ensure that any time a sitting government is thinking about exerting too much dictatorial power over the people they have to think about the amount of armed people living in America.

Me: Wow. I never thought of that. But there's no way that our government could take over the people in the USA by force. There's too many of us and too few of them.

God: No, there are too many ARMED Americans and too few of them. If there were no guns in America there are certain people within the government that would push for the abolishment of the Constitution and the implementation of Marshall Law in a heartbeat.

Me: But they can't because we are armed.

God: That is correct. And no other nation in the world would ever send ground troops into America either because they would find themselves fighting resistance around every street corner in every part of your nation.

Me: So all those people claiming that there are UN Troops secretly stationed in strategic US cities with Russian Troops supporting them ready to take control of our nation are just full of hot air?

God: The hottest. No government, no nation and no Evil Genius will ever plot to overthrow the United States of America for one very important reason...you are armed to the teeth.

Me: It's so true! All of a sudden it seems so important to have guns locked and loaded in order to secure our Freedom.

God: And your Free Will.

Me: So were all the mass shootings in the past few years false flags meant to instigate people to load up on guns for the coming chaos?

God: Yes, the more guns in the hands of the people the better for the kind of potential chaos that could spring from the transition. Believe it or not, the more guns there are in the hands of the people, the less likely the chance that there will be roaming bands of criminals looking to riot.

Me: Why's that?

God: Because they won't know what they are walking into. If everyone has a gun, every potential criminal has another way to die. There would be no more mass shootings, real or staged, because everyone would draw their guns at the first sign of trouble. The more people expect this to happen the less likely they are to cause the trouble in the first place.

Me: I get it. So we should all load up on arms. Buy all the guns and ammo we can afford just so we will never have to use them to defend us.

God: No need to go "Rambo" on us, Bix, but a healthy supply of guns and ammo should be at the fingertips of every Patriotic American.

Me: I'll do my part but I think a public service announcement is necessary here: I would recommend to anyone who buys a gun – please learn how to use it properly. Take a gun safety class. The only thing that happens when people misuse a firearm is that our enemies use the mistake against us in the fight to take our guns away.

God: "Don't be a Fool...Go to Gun School!"

Me: Don't tell me you are doing a "Mr. T" impression!

God: You got it. Pretty good huh?

Me: Not exactly, it's hard to visualize God with a Mohawk!

God: Ha! I could pull it off.

Me: I have no doubt.

End

Chapter 13

Chemtrails and Earth Changes

Me: What's going on with our planet?

God: Like you, it is evolving.

Me: But why so radically?

God: What do you mean?

Me: Storms are more violent. Seasons are shorter and more intense. Strange weather is popping up in strange places. It seems like everything we knew as normal is now different.

God: Yes, change does not happen in smooth waves. Change lurches forward as systems try to hold on to the past.

Me: Like our monetary system...they've been trying to hold it together for so long but it's just going to make the transition harder and more radical.

God: Yes, but that is not at all out of the norm. All complex systems need a jolt to move forward.

Me: So our Earth needs a jolt now?

God: Yes, as it needs to evolve and move forward along with humanity.

Me: And are humans stopping this transition?

God: They are trying to. They are spraying the upper atmosphere to try and stop the natural forces of cosmic evolution.

Me: Chemtrails! I knew they were real! I keep telling my friends and family but they all think it's just the condensation from the jet engines.

God: Yes, they are spraying chemicals and oxides to try and slow the natural evolution of the planet.

Me: You mean they aren't trying to kill us off with the Chemtrails?

God: Ha! No. There are much more efficient ways of killing off the population than spraying toxins 7 miles up in Troposphere.

Me: Then why are they spraying?

God: They are spraying to deflect the increasing heat and particles of radiation called neutrinos that are being emitted from the Sun as it travels through a more materially dense part of the Milky Way Galaxy.

Me: I get why they don't want up to heat up, Global Warming and all, but why are more neutrinos a bad thing?

God: They are not bad but they do cause change. The neutrinos that are produced by the Sun are very, very small particles that pass through almost everything but attach to the plasma particles in the center of the Earth to create matter.

Me: What kind of matter?

God: All kinds of matter. They are the building blocks of the atoms that form your elements. Unlike what you learned in school, matter is being created at all times in the center of the Earth.

Me: Is that what causes Earthquakes and volcanoes and sinkholes?

God: Yes, it is one of the main forces. The more matter formed at the earth's core, the more it must expand – sometimes violently.

Me: So why do people want to stop the natural expansion of the Earth?

God: Because it can be harmful to the normal functioning of humanity as the changes can be cataclysmic in nature.

Me: That sounds like a smart thing to do then.

God: It is never smart to try to stop the natural progression of evolution and this time will ultimately be no different.

Me: Why? What's wrong with blocking the neutrinos from making the earth expand?

God: By slowing down the expansion of the Earth they are not allowing the Earth to become larger and heavier. This is part of the process because the Sun is growing and changing too as it travels through the denser part of the Milky Way. As the Earth grows it naturally falls further behind the Sun's gravitational pull and moderates the increased heat output of the Sun. It is natural for the Sun and the planets within the solar system to become larger and naturally move further apart.

Me: I see. We are trying to stop the expansion of the Earth so that means that we are not going to be far enough away from the Sun as it gets larger and much hotter!

God: Yes, and it is not good in the long run to delay the process of natural evolution.

Me: Surely our spraying isn't having enough effect to last forever.

God: Correct, nature is much more powerful than man.

Me: So at some point the Earth WILL expand, catching up in a more violent way because we have been holding it back.

God: Most likely.

Me: Well that really sucks.

God: It's life.

Me: Not really. Things are going to be worse than they would have been had we not slowed the process by spraying the Chemtrails.

God: That's life.

Me: No, God. That's "Us" meddling with life.

God: Yes, that's life.

Me: You mean things we do to mess things up is life?

God: Yes. It's all part of life. It's all part of your grand adventure.

Me: Even when we screw things up?

God: Especially when you screw things up! It's boring if everything goes as planned and scripted. It's exciting when new challenges are presented and overcome.

Me: You are right, of course. It just seems so wrong when we try to meddle with the way things are supposed to be happening to our planet or our monetary system or our health care system...all of it.

God: YOU are the creator. You are the one making things hard. You must have your reasons and those reasons make up the meaning of your life.

Me: The only reason I can think of for setting it up that way is so I can fix it.

God: Voila! There's your reason.

Me: Hmm. Not sure if that's true but since you say it's so – it must be.

God: I don't say it's so, Bix. You do.

Me: But you just did.

God: And who am I?

Me: I get it. I am you and you are me. We've talked about this before. We are all just parts of the same Oneness with each part experiencing different aspects of our creation.

God: Very good.

Me: So do you want to see the PROOF I have that they are spraying Chemtrails?

God: Sure. Lay it on me...

I took these pictures myself so I know there is no “photo shopping” going on here. Check out the two Chemtrails and then the third plane that is flying along side that has NO exhaust at all...

My Proof of Chemtrails Spraying

Me: Either this third plane is using a special kind of “no exhaust” jet fuel or the other two planes are spraying us!

God: Look’s pretty obvious to me.

Me: Chemtrails are REAL...case closed.

End

Chapter 14

Pushed Out of the Nest

Me: Let's talk more about taking care of ourselves and not relying on our government for all our needs and protection.

God: Very well. You might not like what you hear though.

Me: What do you mean?

God: I mean that many people will die if they have to take care of themselves.

Me: What? Why is that?

God: It is because they have not been trained to be self-sufficient. They may feel like adults but they have never really “left the nest” when it comes to surviving in the natural world.

Me: I like the bird analogy. I did a research paper in high school about the American Eagle so I have always been fascinated with that bird.

God: She’s a very beautiful and majestic bird and your founders chose wisely when picking her as a symbol of your Nation.

Me: I agree. She’s also a very, very strong and powerful bird – one that ANY country would be proud to be associated with.

God: Yes. Tell me more about your understanding of the American Eagle.

Me: I know they are HUGE with a wingspan of 6 to 8 feet wide in a full grown male. They are very strong, great hunters and are considered “The King” in the world of birds of prey because there are no rivals to their strength and size.

God: Hence the majestic ethos.

Me: I also know that they mate for life and there is no venturing out to find other mates for either the male or the female.

God: Very true. They are very loyal.

Me: The male and female share the responsibility of building huge nests high up in the trees and on mountains where they will mate and lay 1-3 eggs.

God: And when these eggs hatch, what happens?

Me: Although they grow to be the size of their parents in about 8 weeks, they cannot fly until their feathers form which is usually 3 months after hatching.

God: And what happens when they finally decide to fly?

Me: Hang on, God. Why are we talking about this?

God: Because you wanted to know about how people will learn to take care of themselves without relying on their government. You wanted to know what happens when people finally “leave the nest.” This was your analogy, and it’s a good one, so now that you have set the stage tell me what happens to the baby eagles when they finally decide to leave the nest and fly on their own.

Me: Oh my God! About 40% of American Eagles die from just falling out of the nest!

God: And of those that do make it out of the nest, how many survive to become adults?

Me: Only a small number survive their first winter alone and without their parents feeding them. Only 1 in 10 American Eagles make it through the next 3 years into adulthood.

God: And after that they can live a full, happy and vibrant life well into their 30’s.

Me: Yeah but this analogy isn’t about humans is it? I mean, I have heard that many people may die during the transition out of our current system and into a new one where we are self-sufficient and we don’t rely on our controllers. Is this true? I mean, aren’t we smarter than eagles and don’t we have more survival tools at our disposal to engineer a transition that would not cause so much harm to the human population?

God: Yes and no. Your tools have made people less self-sufficient and weak. There is no denying it and that is not good for any major transition like the one that is approaching. But you are also creative and resourceful and can definitely build yourself a safe Road that leads to the future in which you wish to live.

Me: So there won’t be Billions of people dying in this transition?

God: Not if they do the work to make themselves self-sufficient. That is totally up to every individual. Some will fail miserably but most will make their way through hard work. They will grow stronger through the necessity of self-preservation and they will find the highest and greatest expression of life through this transformation.

Me: And in the end we will end up in a better place right?

God: You will end up in the place that you create. Not necessarily better or worse but definitely different. You are choosing another Road to navigate your way through your life experience. You will adapt to all the trials and tribulations thrown your way and possibly achieve tremendous successes if you do the work.

Me: And if we don't? If we can't or simply won't put in the effort...what happens then?

God: Then you will suffer the fate of the baby eagles that were not up to the challenge of self-sufficient living.

Me: That sounds so harsh.

God: It is what you have chosen to experience at this moment and in this lifetime.

Me: I don't ever seem to make it easy on myself do I?

God: No, not while you are here.

Me: Well, let's get going. There's a lot to accomplish.

God: That's the spirit, Bix.

Chapter 15

The “E-Ticket” Ride

Me: You told me in one of our previous conversations that some people will never think the crash is over. How is that possible?

God: It will take time to rebalance the system.

Me: How much time?

God: It depends.

Me: Depends on what?

God: On what you choose to move forward with.

Me: You mean like which form of money we use?

God: That is one of the choices you will have to make.

Me: Is there another one?

God: Yes, there are many. You will also need to decide on which form of government you want to have.

Me: What do you mean “which form of government?” I thought we could just go back to the US Constitution as our Founding Fathers had intended.

God: That is one of the choices that you can make but it will not be as easy as you think.

Me: How so?

God: The people of the United States are not prepared to live in a Nation as outlined in your Constitution. They do not know how to take responsibility for their own lives. They are conditioned to rely on the Federal Government to make decisions for them and to provide support and a safety net for all their endeavors.

Me: But that’s how we got into this mess in the first place. It wasn’t that the Federal Government took these rights away from us; we gave it all up willingly.

God: Yes, you did, and how did that work out for you?

Me: Horribly! We don’t control our lives anymore. We don’t control our money; we don’t control our own health care; we don’t control our security – we hardly control ANYTHING anymore. It’s all been outsourced to the Federal Government.

God: That is correct and it was all made possible by the simple act of handing over responsibility to those who govern you. You have willfully given up your Free Will to live your life in a false security.

Me: But I was born into this system. I had no choice.

God: That's what they all said before you, "I had no choice." That's a copout Bix. You do have a choice and you must exercise your God given right of Free Will to make the changes necessary to live the way you wish.

Me: But we are doing that finally. At least I think we are. It is clear to me that the Bad Guys will be taken out of power through the crash of the Global Monetary System. Then we can finally be free to make our own Road forward.

God: Yes, and will you choose to give that responsibility up once again for safety and security?

Me: Hell no! We'll have just gotten out of that trap. It will be many lifetimes before we fall for that con again.

God: Very well. Then you will have many decisions to make going forward and it's all up to you.

Me: Jeez. All up to me? That's a frightening proposition.

God: It's only frightening because you are not used to taking responsibility for yourself. It's time for everyone to grow up and live the way they want to live. Go out and build their own lives without relying on others to tell them what to do.

Me: Ok but that seems like it will be pretty chaotic.

God: At first it will be. All living things must experience turmoil and stress to learn and grow.

Me: So it's kinda like the old saying... "What doesn't kill me makes me stronger?!"

God: Kinda.

Me: So with all this turmoil and all these changes that are hurtling our way, how will we have a smooth transition to our next phase of societal cohesion?

God: You won't.

Me: But I thought the Good Guys were delaying the transition to get things in place for a smooth transition. Isn't that what we talked about in my last book.

God: A smooth transition is relative. Yes, it will be smoother than nuclear war breaking out and destroying the majority of the population, but it will not seem smooth to those learning how to live through the collapse of your economic and societal framework. The end of the past paradigm and the start of something new will take time and adjustments.

Me: What kind of time are we talking about? Days? Weeks? Months?

God: Possibly but it could be years, decades and centuries.

Me: What?! I don't want it to take that long.

God: That is up to you. You must decide on how you want the future to unfold. You must build new Roads to travel once you leave the current paradigm. Some will thrive in this new environment and some will struggle for years trying to hang onto the past.

Me: And what's the best way to deal with all this?

God: Follow your gut instincts. Do what you feel is right and do not fall into the trap of giving up your Free Will. Take responsibility for your future and you will construct a framework in which you will be much happier.

Me: And what if I build my future framework but my ideas are not in line with everyone else's?

God: Most likely they won't be.

Me: Then wouldn't any form of cohesive Government be impossible in that scenario?

God: Like I said, it will be very different. After the crash most people will take responsibly for themselves not by choice but by necessity. After the crash there will be no more safety nets. You are free to FALL all on your own.

Me: But we can also choose to FLY because we don't have the weight of our controllers around our necks. We will be free to experience life the way it was meant to be experienced.

God: You would know – this is your creation.

Me: Very true. I'm both terrified and excited about all these changes. Will it all turn out ok in the end?

God: It will turn out the way you planned it.

Me: It's going to be quite a ride.

God: It's an "E-Ticket Ride," Bix. Creating the future is an "E-Ticket Ride."

Chapter 16

The Golden Parachute

Me: Tell me more about the 1934 Gold Reserve Act and why it is still so important.

God: The public was told it was enacted to secure the gold in the United States so it would stay in the country after the 1929 Stock Market Crash and the Great Depression that followed. Many Gold Bugs bring it up every time they are worried about gold confiscation by your Government.

Me: But that was not the whole story was it?

God: No, the truth behind the Gold Reserve Act was that it gave the US Government a way out of going deep into debt without selling off the gold reserves they were hiding in the Grand Canyon. The Act gave the US Treasury the legal ability to issue a massive amount of paper gold-backed bonds secured by the billions of ounces of gold found in the Grand Canyon in the early 1900's.

Me: We've talked about the Gold in the Grand Canyon many times. I thought it hasn't been mined and was being saved for a "rainy day" when the US has to return to a Gold Standard.

God: That is true. The majority of the gold is still in the ground but some of it was also contractually swapped out with interest to countries around the world in exchange for their gold holdings.

Me: Is that what all those 1934 US Bonds that have recently been recovered was all about...swapping the Grand Canyon gold that was still in the ground for above ground gold?

God: Yes.

Me: But I thought all those bonds were believed to be fakes.

God: That's what the Federal Reserve has told those that have tried to cash them in.

Me: Is it true?

God: No, not for most of the bonds. Most of these gold-backed bonds are genuine and the US Fed has reneged on their obligation to repay both the face value and the interest owed in gold.

Me: But these bonds are so old. I don't even think there is anyone alive that knows what they are all about.

God: That's the problem that those who are trying to cash them in are facing.

Me: These people that are attempting to cash them in, are they the real owners of the bonds?

God: No. Mostly they were stolen from governments that held the bonds or were discovered in the secret caves in the Philippines that held Yamashita's Gold. There is so much confusion about who really owns these bonds that the Federal Reserve has been able to claim that NONE of them are legitimate since they are not recorded on any modern day balance sheet.

Me: How is that possible?

God: The gold held in the Grand Canyon has been kept secret for over a hundred years. It has not been discussed in the mainstream media since first announced in the New York Times in 1912. It's been the coveted secret of the United States and the reason they were given permission for the US Dollar to become the World's Reserve Currency at the Bretton Woods Conference in 1944.

Me: I always wondered why the US was given all that power by the rest of the world. We were still in the middle of WWII and nobody was sure who would emerge victorious still the US was given the control over the only "World's Reserve Currency."

God: There is always much more going on behind the scenes of any monetary meeting or agreement.

Me: But what happened to the accounting issue for the earlier 1934 gold-backed bonds? How could the US sweep this issue under the rug?

God: After winning WWII the US and the Federal Reserve took control of most of the world's monetary systems and procedures by creating the World Bank, the IMF, the BIS and ultimately the computerized SWIFT System which controls all transactions between central banks.

Me: Interesting. So when the US took charge of everything related to banking we started to abuse the entire system by rigging markets and dishonoring agreements?

God: Yes, and then when everything went digital in the 1970's there were massive omissions of data, documents and information.

Me: I guess I never thought about that. Before computers everything was recorded on hand written ledgers and there was no way that countries could keep track of who owed what to whom.

God: Yes, and the Federal Reserve and US Treasury were quick to sweep many of their promises under the rug during the transition to electronic money.

Me: That's crazy stuff. Surely there were people who knew what was going on and were angry the US was reneging on their promises.

God: Of course, but remember, with the invention of the atomic bomb the United States was now the ONLY big bully on the block. Every other nation in the world feared that if they made the US angry they would drop a nuclear bomb on their country and there would be nothing left to worry about. Everyone bowed down to the new monetary kings of the world.

Me: That's so weird to think about. We really were the Monetary Masters of the whole world after World War II - but that's changing now, isn't it?

God: Yes it is. Those who controlled the United States used their massive monetary power to destroy nations and implement their own forms of government around the world. They have abused the privilege of holding the World's Reserve Currency and the rest of the world is now preparing for the collapse of the US Dollar as well as all other forms of un-backed fiat money.

Me: But how can the US Dollar collapse while they still control the prices of all foreign exchange through their computer trading of trillions of dollars worth of currency related derivatives everyday?

God: The US will not do anything they do not want to do. They control it all.

Me: So how can the US Dollar collapse?

God: The US wants the game to be over. They want to return to a sounder form of money. They want to return to their roots based in the US Constitution and the Bill of Rights. They want to come Home.

Me: I see. And once we destroy fiat money we can use all the gold in the Grand Canyon and other hiding spots as our new form of Money.

God: You mean your old form of money.

Me: Yes, of course. We want to return to our monetary roots of using gold and silver as money. So now it's time to finally use that metal we have kept hidden in the ground for over 100 years.

God: Yes. It is time to move into The Golden Age.

Me: So the US has this massive Golden Parachute we can give to the people to guide us into the future.

God: Exactly.

End

Chapter 17

The Best Laid Plans

Me: God, I'm afraid we may win the battle against the Bad Guys but lose the war.

God: Explain.

Me: I can see how we can take down the monetary system and remove the Bad Guys from their places of power but I don't have a clear vision of how we move forward from there.

God: It will be a difficult Road to travel.

Me: I know that but the longer it takes, the worse it gets. I can easily see how the people will be begging for the same Bad Guys to help us get out of this mess.

God: That is true.

Me: But if it does take too long and we end up turning back to our old system with the same people running the show, they will surely institute their One World Government plans to control us all.

God: It is one of the potential outcomes.

Me: Unfortunately, it seems more and more likely that it was their plan all along to make us so dependent upon them that there is no other way to live our lives. Was it their plan and are we playing right into it?

God: Yes, their plan was to make you totally and completely dependent upon the system and then crash it. After the crash they plan on backing out and letting you fend for yourselves for a few years making sure you fail and making sure you turn to them for help when you are desperate to survive.

Me: What an evil plot they are implementing.

God: Yes, but it provides you with ample scenarios to experience life at it's wildest and, if you ultimately defeat the Bad Guys, you will experience the greatest joy in your lifetime.

Me: I guess so. How long have they been planning for this moment?

God: Many, many centuries and their timing is precisely tuned to their specifications. There is no wavering and there are no second chances for them. They either succeed in their task or they are destroyed and you are free to live as you wish.

Me: Really? Many centuries? How could that be?

God: Bix, don't you know what you are about to experience?

Me: No. What do you mean?

God: This is Armageddon: the final battle between the forces of Good and Evil. Between God and the Devil. Between Truth and Fiction. This is it Bix. The Biblical Prophecy written thousands of years ago is at your doorstep now.

Me: You must be kidding. Don't you mean this coming chaos is like the Battle of Armageddon?

God: No Bix! This is it, the real thing.

Me: Wow. I forgot...who wins the Battle of Armageddon in the Bible?

God: The Good Guys win, Bix. Good always triumphs over evil in the end.

Me: And this is the end?

God: Yes and no. If you win this battle it is the end of the Bad Guys reign over you and you are free to live as you wish.

Me: And if we lose?

God: If you lose then they'll have to write a new ending to the Bible.

Me: So we do win!

God: Yes, if you fight for what you want.

Me: And if we don't fight for our freedom and just sit back and let it all happen?

God: Then you will get what you deserve.

Me: And what is that?

God: You just told me what you expect if you don't win this battle. People will turn to their government and their old leaders for help and they will take away all of the People's freedoms and institute their One World Government. You have long talked about the danger of turning to your government to solve the problems after the crash but you said that it's NOT what you WANTED.

Me: It's not! Not at all - I want to be FREE but I think we will turn to our government? There will be so much chaos during the economic crash that we will have to turn to our government to survive.

God: Yes, you likely will.

Me: But we can't turn to them. We would destroy our country and our lives. This is so confusing. How can we move forward?

God: Make the choice to do so. You can do this. Make it so the choices are clear to all. Lift up the veil of the Bad Guys and show people what has been done to them. Expose their plans for humanity and let the people decide where they want to go from there.

Me: But how can that be done? When we are on our knees, literally dying off, the only choice left is to turn to our government and leaders to save us. How can we fix that problem?

God: That's easy...change your Government! Change your Leaders! Make your only choice a wise choice. If you know the people will turn to their government for help then put the RIGHT people in the right places in your Government and hold them accountable every step of the way. Demand the open and honest application of your Constitution...for once! Do not return to the leadership of the Bad Guys. There is a Road forward for humanity – you just need to choose it.

Me: Wow! Could that really happen?

God: Are you really going to ask me that again? Of course it could, this is your experience that you are creating to your own specifications. Anything is possible – it just takes YOU to make it happen.

Me: I get that but again, it seems like a very tall order for me and everyone involved.

God: It is the tallest you will face in this lifetime.

Me: I guess I understand and I'm up for the challenge because if we don't change our government and rulers then the Bad Guys will surely win in the end and that prospect is unthinkable to me.

God: Good Bix. You can do this. You can all create your own future.

Me: Ok God, thanks for the pep talk.

God: You are welcome.

End

Chapter 18

The Silver Lining

Me: This book seems much more depressing than my previous books. How come it's taken such a dark turn?

God: Do you call a turn toward Freedom “dark?”

Me: No, but it sure doesn't look like the kind of scenario played out in the Fed comic book, “Wishes and Rainbows.”

God: It's just a comic book, Bix. Reality is a lot more complicated and a lot messier. It has to be in order to fulfill everyone's desired experience here on Earth.

Me: I suppose but does it really have to be so dire and gloomy in the weeks, months and years ahead of us?

God: It's going to be what you choose it to be. If you choose to have a Happy Ending before you experience the pain of transition then that is what you choose.

Me: Something is telling me that is not what I chose for this lifetime.

God: That something is your desire to experience the transition to its fullest with all the ups and downs that go with it.

Me: I know! Why do I do this to myself?

God: Because you enjoy the battle, Bix. You enjoy the challenge and you enjoy the struggle.

Me: Why would I enjoy all that?

God: Because you LOVE the experience of overcoming challenges and struggles and you LOVE to win the Good Battle.

Me: I guess I do.

God: I guarantee you do.

Me: So in the end, after all is said and done, there is a Happy Ending?

God: Yes, it is the Silver Lining to all the struggle, pain and hardship.

Me: And it's all worth it in the end?

God: You tell me.

Me: I believe so. I believe that the battle for what is right is absolutely worth it whether we win or lose but...

God: What is it Bix?

Me: Truthfully God, I don't think the Silver Lining needs to end in a victory over the Bad Guys. I think the Silver Lining is having this experience of fighting the good fight for the right reasons. Win, lose or draw I'm very happy to have experienced and participated in this battle at this time in history.

That's my Silver Lining.

God: Well said, Bix. Well said.

“Solutions” from www.RoadtoRoota.com

NOTE: After the Crash there will be people who wish to rejigger the old system trying to fix all the problems, inject honest and sound principles and restart it the way it was because they don't want to lose what they have worked their whole lives for. I understand their motivations and I do not fault their desires.

But I do question their willingness and ability to do the kind of work it will take to change the old system into something built on honest and sound principles. I don't think they will find the majority of people willing to work that hard to reset something they were abused by – honest or not.

But if you do feel that we should try here is what would be required to change just a small part of the equation – the Silver Market.

You tell me if you think this can be accomplished...

The Silver Manipulation Solution:

17 Requirements for a Freely Traded Silver Market/Exchange Structure

The silver market is broken and has been broken for a long, long time. Much longer than most people think although many people can finally SEE the problems with the market now as the paper market continues to distort the price of physical silver. It is silver derivatives and computer trading models introduced in the 1970's that really started to distort the market value and it has never been more distorted than it is today. Hundreds of Billions of silver derivative ounces are transacted by the bullion banks every year to steer and control the price of silver. This volume of silver trading dwarfs the tiny physical silver market that only provides a few hundred million ounces of physical silver to the market annually for investors to buy.

Those of us who know this to be true have tried to position ourselves such that the wide ranging price dynamic would not effect the position we took to take advantage of the inevitable price spike that must happen AFTER price manipulation ends. To do that we have bought physical silver and removed it from the system and out of the hands of the manipulators. Because we knew the price riggers could place the price of silver derivatives at $0/oz or $1M/oz with a click of a mouse it was the only way to ride out the manipulation.

So that's what we have done and now we sit and await the END of this manipulation. We all knew it would be chaotic and produce very extreme pricing swings (as we are seeing now with sub $20 silver) but we knew it must end.

That is where we are now.

Many around the world are preparing for the end of market manipulation not only from a government/populace standpoint but also from a regulatory standpoint. That is what the CFTC was working on as it related to the Dodd-Frank Rules. It was never intended to end the manipulation but rather it was a way to RESTART the system AFTER the manipulation was OVER.

I'd like to present (again for some) my 17 requirements to restart the silver trading markets after the current manipulative structure ends or AFTER THE CRASH. These are minimum requirements that will have to be addressed in a POST crash environment where nobody would trust the derivative market pricing structure after the years of abuse. This is what the silver market regulation SHOULD look like today.

Goal: A fair and viable silver derivative market where no trader or group of traders can intentionally influence the price of physical silver.

Market Requirements:

1) End Excessive Concentration -- The size of positions held and traded in the silver derivative world should be realistically in line with the physical metal available. Enforceable regulations should be designed to both end the current manipulation and remove the potential for future manipulations using concentrated positions.

2) Require Public Position Disclosure -- Any company that cannot operate an honest silver trading operation without a veil of secrecy should not be allowed to participate in the markets. All positions of large silver trading companies should be made public to both instill confidence in the free market and expose foul play. The benefits of transparency far outweigh the argument that public disclosure would impair the proprietary trading ability of the participants.

3) Verify/Certify Physical Metal Backing -- Currently, the regulators are blind to the physical markets and should NOT take any traders pledge as fact that they have metal to backup any large short position. The CFTC should actively verify and certify ALL metal that is pledged against COMEX contracts. This certification should include onsite physical audit of bars, drilling of a random sampling of bars, CFTC certification of purity and on going oversight of physical inventories.

4) Physical Reconciliation Audit -- The purity of physical gold and silver bars are being questioned like never before. There is very little trust that the metal is pure and has not been tainted by tungsten, molybdenum or lead. Unbelievably, large gold and silver bars are rarely drilled and tested for their purity or for tampering. The CFTC should spearhead a global "re-melt" program of the world's inventories and set up a certification process such that any tampering with the newly minted and certified bars can be effectively tracked back to the perpetrator.

5) Analyze Significant Price Action -- The silver market is highly volatile often moving in concert without any economic or supply/demand justification. These sudden drastic moves in metal prices should be analyzed to determine WHO started the move, WHAT trading actions did they take during the move, WHO benefited from the move and was the move only temporary. An intentional operation to artificially affect the price of the metal is illegal under the Commodities Exchange Act and should not be tolerated.

6) Audit Past Manipulative Maneuvers -- The crimes of market manipulation in the past should not go unpunished. There is a mountain of excellent evidence collected by silver advocates that prove silver has been illegally manipulated for many years. Just because the criminals got away with a crime when it was committed does not mean they should be allowed to walk and trade freely among us. The COMEX crimes of the past should be investigated and prosecuted.

7) Audit/Verify/Certify "Approved Warehouses" -- The COMEX approved warehouses are owned and controlled by most of the very same entities that are accused of rigging the gold and silver markets. The CFTC relies heavily on the warehouse data in determining the dynamics of the physical markets. The potential for deceptive practices, false reporting, metal alterations and flat out fraud are huge. The CFTC should monitor, verify and certify all metal stored in "Approved Warehouses" to ensure the market has access to correct information.

8) Audit/Verify/Certify Physical Metal Hedges -- Commercial hedging of mining production is the reason the futures and options markets exist. Without the need for mining companies to hedge the market price of their product the COMEX would have no reason to exist other than being a gambling establishment. If large mining companies, such as Barrick, wish to hedge their production the CFTC should investigate if the reserves in the ground are verifiable, economic and have little risk associated with extraction such as the potential for nationalization.

9) Remove ETF Physical Substitution -- The COMEX now allows shares of the ETF's SLV and GLD to be substituted for physical metal delivery. This is a flat out scam of epic proportions! There are more holes and loopholes in the prospectus of these two ETF's than any other investment vehicle in the world. ETF shares ARE NOT physical metal. JP Morgan, for example, is the custodian for the silver in SLV but does not own title to that silver nor do they have any right to justify their gigantic COMEX short using that physical silver. By not speaking up at this obvious attempt to distort the physical supply of metal the CFTC is exposing itself as either the most incompetent regulator in the world or the most corrupt.

10) Investigate Collusion between Large Traders -- Collusion is often difficult to prove but it is not impossible. The CFTC should fully investigate emails, phone records, meetings and motives when collusion is suspected on suspicious large price moves. The CFTC "Enforcement Division" should have expanded powers to investigate anyone who wishes to trade gold and silver on the COMEX.

11) Compare Volatility to Supply/Demand Dynamics -- Gold and silver has the highest price volatility of any commodity traded on the

COMEX and yet they both have one of the most stable supply/demand dynamics. Gold and silver mine production and consumption/investment demand is very consistent year-over-year changing very gradually yet the prices are whipsawed in huge swings. This disconnect should be a glaring red light screaming... "MANIPULATION!"

12) Employ Experts to Regulate Gold/Silver Markets -- When I call the CFTC to complain about silver manipulation I get an "economist" who reads from a script off his computer screen, which denies any manipulation. When I ask, "Who is in charge of overseeing the silver market?" he says, "We all oversee all the markets". I find it truly amazing that the CFTC does NOT have a dedicated specialist for silver or gold. What kind of oversight or regulation is possible without the most basic understanding of the commodity you are overseeing? The CFTC should hire experts to concentrate on understanding all aspects of the gold and silver markets.

13) Engage Outside Expert Consultants -- As far as I know the CFTC has NEVER hired an outside expert on the gold or silver markets even though there are many who are willing to assist them for FREE! Not only does this raise suspicion about their competence but it begs the question of WHY NOT? I'd like to suggest that the CFTC create a "Panel of Outside Expert Consultants" to assist them in understanding the gold and silver markets.

14) Control Gold/Silver Derivatives -- The most insane part of this whole debacle is the outsized gold and silver derivative complex that dominates the trading activity of a very small physical market. The CFTC should get to the bottom of the gold and silver derivatives held at the major Bullion Banks as well as other institutions to determine if these derivatives were constructed to manipulate/control markets or is there a legitimate economic reason for them. Understanding the entire metal complex will assist them in understanding the COMEX gold and silver markets.

15) Ban High Frequency Computer Trading -- High speed computer trading makes a mockery of the entire free market concept. Allowing individual firms or a small collection of firms to make millions of trades back and forth every second has done more to distort the price of commodities than any other pricing dynamic. Bernie Madoff's firm specialized in trades like these and there are other firm still in operation rigging the markets today.

16) Daily Volume Limits and Public Disclosure -- Although position limits are important in order to stop market manipulation, limits on daily trade volumes and public disclosure of participant trades is also vital in making sure no manipulation is taking place. A company that buys and sells tens of thousands of contracts each day but settles out near even won't stand out as having a manipulative concentration but is clearly manipulating the price. Transparency is key to a free and open market and should trump the desire to hide proprietary trading positions.

17) CFTC Employment Restrictions -- The revolving door between US Regulators and the Wall Street firms they are supposed to regulate is one of the most egregious travesties of justice ever perpetrated on the investing public. The CFTC Commissioners and legal staff are clearly as guilty as senior members of the SEC. CFTC employees should not be able to work for or be associated with any company or commodity they regulate for at least 10 years before and after their employment at the CFTC. Without this separation the urge to favor past or future employers is too strong. CFTC employees should be rewarded for enforcing the laws... not bending them.

Until these recommendations are met there is NO CHANCE of a truly free market in silver developing.

Unfortunately, it will likely take another Global Market Meltdown for the regulators to take these recommendations to heart.

By then it may be too late.

Epilogue

Moving Forward

This book was more dictated rather than written because I did not stop and edit any of my Conversations as they were taking place. I let them flow as they were intended and I made very few changes after each Conversation was over. Ultimately, the book was written the way it was meant to be – for the situation that confronts us.

After putting the Conversations together into the complete book one thing stood out to me – I wasn't offering much hope. There is no doubt that we are in trouble and there are many dark scenarios we may encounter down this Road we travel, but we STILL get to choose our own path. We still have Free Will and we can still find a way through the darkness.

Human beings are amazing creatures that have proven time and time again that they can be very adaptive when necessary. Working through problems and issues can foster creative “work-arounds” and innovative solutions. We have the know-how and technology to survive this transition and change our world for the better so that's what I will be striving for from here on out.

Making A Better Future.

I'll start this process by recommending to people and communities that they become self-sufficient so they don't have to rely on the proper functioning of government for all their basic needs. No, it's not as difficult as you may think. There are excellent solutions to many of the basic problems that will be highlighted in the wake of the upcoming economic collapse.

Find A Way to Move Forward.

I was just recently shown an all-inclusive, integrated system called a “Helical Outpost” that provides off-grid food, water, power, communications, education and HOPE for any community that wants to become self-sufficient. This is not just the “wet dream” of a Prepper – this is a reality and when the need arises, we will see more of these types of solutions popup. We don't need our Government to take care of us...

We need faith in ourselves.

THE HELICAL OUTPOST

www.helicalholdings.com

The Helical Outpost is a sustainable integrated hydroponic greenhouse and power station with satellite internet access and a water filtration system that creates up to 2,000 gallons of clean water per day, 10.8 kilowatt hours of commercial grade solar power and 2,300 crop units per week. The Outpost's hydroponic farm uses 80% less water and produces more than 10 times the equivalent of 3 acres of organic farm soil in 6,000 square feet. All of these resources unpack from a shipping container with plug and play capabilities that can be easily deployed anywhere in the world.

The Road to Roota Letters

by Bix Weir

"May the Road you choose be the Right Road"

About the author:

Bix Weir has 30 years experience in the financial industry with various fortune 500 companies. He is the creator of the "Road to Roota Theory" and his commentary and analysis are published at www.RoadtoRoota.com. Bix is a frequent guest on alternative media talk shows and is a featured speaker at the annual Silver Summit Investment Conference.

Over the last 15 years Bix has dedicated his efforts to exposing the long-term manipulation of the gold and silver markets. He has worked closely with the Gold Anti-Trust Action Committee (GATA) helping to pull the curtain away from the Cabal of international bankers that has taken control of our free market system.

At RoadtoRoota.com Bix deals with the conspiracy and manipulation side of the gold, silver and financial markets and is not constrained by conventional thinking of how market prices fluctuate. Bix has developed this website to aid in the discovery of the truth behind our massively manipulated markets and to help expose those who threaten our free market system.
